[From the New York Observer]. "GO YE ALSO INTO THE VINEYARD."

> BY MISS CARRIE A. SPALDING. The vines are all trailing, The hedge broken down, The fresh, verdant hue

Of the leaves sere and brown. Wild grapes in profusion The vineyard doth show Where the rich purple clusters

In beauty should grow. Why stand ye here idle? The sun rises high; Already his chariot

Is gilding the sky. In the flush of the morning To the vineyard repair, While dew-laden blossoms Are filling the air.

The weeds, growing thickly, Now choke the young vines: Around wide-spreading brambles Each tendril entwines. Noxious plants scatter vapor, Mildew and decay;

"Little foxes" are stealing The foliage each day. Why stand ye here gazing

On castles of air? Upon rainbows that fade In circles of care? Why playing with bubbles That burst at a breath, While over your head Is the shadow of death?

These treasures will tarnish That now glitter bright, Or take themselves wings And vanish from sight; But the fruit of the vintage, A wonderful store, Will increase with your labor A hundred times o'er.

Are hearts dim with weeping, And hearts crushed with grief, In their helplessness, looking Earthward for relief? Behold, in the vineyard, The Master appears! To give "beauty for ashes,"

Oh, laborers, haste! For the sky is o'ercast; The threatening tempest Is gathering fast. Then bind up the vines To the sheltering wall, Ere the wind sweep the earth And the rain-torrents fall.

Still waiting and dreaming? The day now declines ; Turn no longer away From the perishing vines. Oh, work with thy might Till the shadows appear, And the cheering "Well done!" Shall fall on thine ear

A BEAUTIFUL STORY. "A cheerful word of sympathy May scatter clouds away ; One little act performed in love Turns darkness into day."

It was a warm summer afternoon; a lazy breeze stole through the windows of a little hot district school-house, lifting the white curtains, and rustling the leaves of the copy-books that lay open on all the desks. Thirty or forty scholars of all ages were bending over their writing, quiet and busy; the voice of the master, as he passed about among the writers, was the only sound. But, though silent, this little light, hot school-room has its heroes and heroines as | cense neither, the old rascal that has ruined my huscertainly as the wider sphere of life.

MOVING INTO TOWN.

He was a small farmer, said my friend, and a happier family I never saw than Mr. Cline's. The boys did all they could to help the delicate puny mother, and when they went to town Cline would pick her up in his arms and put her in the wagon as if she were a baby. He was a great stalwart man, and she a little mite of a thing. She worshipped him, as little women are apt to do with big husbands, and you would rarely hear her tell a story that Henry Cline was not in the beginning, or the middle, or the end of | 1 Belle

"We hadn't no Christmas, cause father wasn't to bum," said William Cline to my boy the day after that world-wide holiday, "he always fills our hats with candy night afore, never to speak of the books and toys and things."

And I know just how it was; he was as fond and oving a father as he was a husband. One night Mr. Cline came home in high glee; he was in such spirits that one might suppose he had indulged in a glass only that he never did such a thing.

A fine situation had been offered him in the town, a dozen miles distance, where he did his trading. He would get forty dollars a month as switch-tender at the railway depot, and their oldest boy have the privilege of teaming from the cars to the town. " Now, old girl," he said, slapping his wife on her

"You heard he lost the switch," she said to me. I replied in the negative.

"O yes, it's gone, and we are going to the bad as fast as we can. He never had no taste for liquor till we came here, but it was right next house to him, and he was tempted all the time, and he couldn't

Read what Dr. Read says: -WINDSOR, April 16, 1866. MESSRS. ROGERS & Co.: Gents. :- In reference to the case of Epithelioma of the Lip, in which I used your Ointment, I beg to say that the patient entirely recovered, and has continued well ever since. I have also used the Medicine in some cases of obstinate Skin Diseases, with much benefit. I believe it to be a valuable remedy in many otherwise intractable cases. H. H. READ, M. D.

> AND STILL THEY COME! STORMONT, Guysboro', April 17, 1866;

Messrs. Rogers & Co. : Gents :- Your Medicine has made another wonderful cure. Thomas Cooper, Esq., of Lachabor Lake (storekeeper), got some for his wife, who had been afflicted with Scrofula for seven years, and nothing she got from the doctors did her any good. Mr. Cooper says her face was in a dreadful state with running sores, but is now well. As he expressed it, "It made a total cure of her."
