TREASURES.

I have some withered flowers That are softly laid away, Not because they were so beautiful And fragrant in their day ; But little fingers clasped them, And little lips caressed, And little hands so tenderly Placed them on "mother's" breast. The paper that enfolds them Was white in other years; But 'tis yellow now, and crumpled, And stained with many tears. Yet, though they look so worthless, This paper and the flowers, They clasp and hold, like links of gold, Memories of jewel hours.

I have some little ringlets That are softly laid away; Their lustre and their beauty Are like the sun's glad ray. But 'tis not for this I prize them-It is that they restore The tender grace of a loving face That gladdens earth no more. As shipwrecked men, at midnight, Have oft been known to cling-With a silent prayer, in wild despair, To some frail floating thing-So I, in darkened moments, Clasp, with a voiceless prayer, Whilst wandering wide on grief's deep tide, These locks of golden hair.

I have some broken playthings That are softly laid away, With some dainty little garments Made in a long-past day. To each there is a history; But this I may not tell, Lest the old, old flood of sorrow Again should rise and swell. Now that the skies have brightened, And the fearful storm is o'er, Let me sit in tender calmness, On Memory's silent shore, And count the simple treasures That still remains to show Where Hope's fair freight, by saddest fate, Was shipwrecked, long ago. I have another treasure That is softly laid away, And, though I have not seen it This many a weary day, From everything around me Comes a token and a sign That 'tis fondly watched and guarded, And that it still is mine. When the flowers lie dead in winter, In their winding-sheets of snow, We know they'll rise to charm our eyes Again in summer's glow. Thus I, in this chill season, When frost and darkness reign, Wait the blest spring whose warmth shall bring Life to my flower again. Home Journal.

hand, to the men who had lost their way. Anu you can easily imagine how glad the men were, how eagerly they came up to the cottage door and lighted their lantern again, and looked at the map, and the compass, and the marks on the trees, and so found out the right road.

You will understand from what has been said that there were some men in an adjoining town who had been condemned to death, and who where to be executed the next morning. And the men who had lost their way in the wood were messengers carrying a pardon from the king, to save the lives of the condemned men.

Then, with their lantern lighted, and feeling sure of the way, they pushed on in their journey. And on their way back through the wood they stopped at this cottage again. They told the old grandmother that they had reached the city to which they had been sent in good time. They had delivered the king's pardon and so had saved the lives of the poor men who were condemned to death. "But," said they, "we should never have been able to do this i we had not found the right road; and we never should have done this but for the help your grand daughter gave us, when she brought us the light we needed so much."

Here we see how much good was done by so little a thing as a rushlight; and there are several very nice missionary lessons taught us by this story. In the first place we have a good illustration here of the condition of the heathen. It is just like that of those prisoners. They were condemned to death ; and so are the heathen-" all under sin," and " child ren of wrath," are the words in which the Bible re presents the condition of all people till they learn to know and love Jesus.

And then there was a pardon for those prisoners. but they did not know it. And in this respect thheathen are just like them. Jesus has died for them. and purchased a pardon; but they have never heare of His death, or of the pardon which he has pur chased.

In the second place, we have a good illustration o the work that missionaries have to do. They are like the king's messengers spoken of in this story. A messenger is one sent; and this is jus the definition of a missionary. Those messengers were sent by the king to carry a pardon to men whe were under condemnation. And this is exactly the missionary's work.

It was necessary for those messengers to make haste, or the prisoners might be put to death before the pardon came. And so it is with the missionary. "The king's business requires haste." Remembe. the words of the bymn-

At the Annual Meeting held in August 1859, the following highly satisfactory results were shown :--

FIRE DEPARTMENT. The most gratifying proof of the expansion of the business is exhibited in the one following fact-that the increase alone of the last three years exceeds the entire business of some of the existing and of many of the recently defunct fire insurance companies of this kingdom. The Premiums for the year 1855 being.....£130,060 While the Preiniums for the year 1558 are 196,148 r upwards of 50 per cent. in three years. The recent returns of duty made by Government for this latter year (1958) again show the "Royal" as more that naintaining the ratio of its increase as stated in former years. Only one ar long the London insurance offices exhibits an advance to the extent of one-half the increase of the Company, while all the others respectively fall far short of the noiety of its advance

rhe amount of new Life Premiums received this year is by far the largest received in any similar period since the ornmencement of the business, and must far exceed the average of amount received by the most successful offices .n the kingdom. The number of policies issued in the year was 832, the sum assured £387,752 6s. 8d., and the premium £12,354 3s. 4d. These figures show a very rapid extension f business during the last ten years. A PITY TO HAVE AN EMPTY SEAT.

A few weeks ago a gentleman was obliged to go t a distant depot, at an hour when there was no cor veyance thither. So, although very weary, and no strong, he was obliged to set out on a walk of two o three miles. After he had gone a little way, he wa overtaken by a gentleman and a little boy in a carr. age. The fine horse was at once reined in, and hi owner said, with a smile, "I presume, sir, you ar going but a short way ; but this little fellow insist on my asking you to ride with us. I told him I ha no doubt you were going to the first station ; but b said, 'The gentleman is a stranger, father ; it is ver easy to ask him. It always seems to me such a pit to ride with an empty seat !'"

Now, that ride, which cost the gentleman neithe money, time, nor trouble, was a real blessing to th The following interesting illustration is from the weary minister of Christ; and he told him so whe pen of the Rev.
