THE SINNER'S SURE RETREAT.

To Christ, the sinner's sure retreat,
A weary pilgrim bends her feet;
Sheltered beneath eternal love,
Safe from the storms which lowered above.

Touched with invigorating power,
Heavenward her drooping hopes aspire;
Gladly she turns from life's wild maze,
On Jesus' peerless love to gaze.

No meaner fire could fill her breast:
Where should her fond affections rest?
Where cling with deep, ecstatic joy?
What love but Christ's her soul employ?

Still to the cross she lifts her eye,
Her Saviour's bleeding love to spy;
Christ's love her languid soul inspires,
And then she burns with deep desires.

Idols of earth, farewell, farewell!
Henceforth on Christ my hopes shall dwell.
Lord, free me from their dread control,
Dissolve these fetters of my soul.

Jesus, thy bleeding love display,
And charm my roving heart away
From aught below the sky. Allure
To joys in thee which will endure—

Endure amidst distress and pain,
And brightest glow when sorrow reigns.
Blest joy! an earnest of the love
Pervades our blissful home above!

TRUE NOBILITY.

BY RICHARD HUIS, M. D.

I had taken a place on the top of one of the coaches which ran between Edinburgh and Glasgow, for the purpose of commencing a short tour in the Highlands of Scotland. It was in the month of June, a season when travellers of various descriptions flock towards the modern Athens, and thence betake themselves to the northern or western counties, as their business or fancy leads. As we rattled along Princes Street, I had leisure to survey my fellow-travellers. Immediately opposite to me sat two dandies of the first water, dressed in white great coats and Belcher handkerchiefs; and each with a cigar in his mouth, which he puffed away with marvellous self-complacency. Beside me sat a modest and comely young woman in a widow's dress, and with an infant about nine months old in her arms. The appearance of this youthful mourner and her baby indicated that they belonged to the working class of society; and though the dandies occasionally cast a rude glance at the mother, the look of calm and settled sorrow which she invariably at such times cast upon her child seemed to touch even them, and to disarm their coarseness. On the other side of the window sat a young gentleman of plain, yet prepossessing exterior, who seemed especially to attract the notice of the dandies. His surtout was not absolutely threadbare, but it had evidently seen more than one season, and I could perceive many contemptuous looks thrown upon it by the gentlemen in the Belcher handkerchiefs. The young gentleman carried a small portmanteau in his hand, so small indeed that it could not possibly have contained more than one change of linen. This article also appeared to arrest the eyes of the sprigs of fashion opposite, whose wardrobes in all probability were more voluminous; whether they were paid for or not might be another question.

The coach having stopped at the village of Corstorphine, for the purpose of taking up an inside passenger, the guard, observing that the young gentleman carried his portmanteau in his hand asked leave to put it into the boot, to which he immediately assented. "Put it fairly in the centre, guard," said one of the dandies. "Why so, Tom?" inquired his companion. "It may capsize the coach," rejoined the first—a sally at which both indulged in a burst of laughter; but of which the owner of the portmanteau, though the blood mounted slightly into his cheek, took no notice whatever.

The morning being fine at our first setting out, the ride was peculiarly pleasant. The dandies talked of horses and dogs, and fowling pieces, and percussion-caps; every now and then mentioning the names of Lord John and Sir Harry, as if their acquaintance lay among the great ones of the land. Once or twice I thought I saw an expression of contempt in the countenance of the young gentleman in the surtout, but in this I might be mistaken. His attention was evidently most directed to the mourner beside him, with whom he appeared anxious to get into conversation, but to lack for a time a favorable opportunity.

While we were changing horses at the little village of Uphall, an aged beggar approached, and held out his hand for alms. The dandies looked at him with scorn. I gave him a few half-pence; and the young widow, poor as she seemed, was about to do the same, when the young gentleman in the surtout laid his hand gently on her arm, and dropping a half-crown into the beggar's hat, made a sign for him to depart. The dandies looked at each other. "Showing off, Jack," said the one. "Ay, ay, successful at our last benefit, you know," rejoined the other, and both again burst into a horse-laugh. At this allusion to his supposed profession, the blood again mounted into the young gentleman's cheek, but it was only for a moment, and he continued silent.

We had not left Uphall many miles behind us when the wind began to rise, and the gathering clouds indicated an approaching shower. The dandies began to prepare their umbrellas; and the young gentleman in the surtout surveying the dress of the widow, and perceiving that she was but indifferently provided against a change of weather, inquired of the guard if the coach was full inside. Being answered in the affirmative, he addressed the mourner in a tone of sympathy; told her that there was every appearance of a smart shower; expressed his regret that she could not be taken into the coach; and concluded by offering her the use of his cloak. "It will protect you so far," said he, "and at all events it will protect the baby." The widow thanked him in a modest and respectful manner, and said that for the sake of her infant she should be glad to have the cloak, if he would not suffer from the want of it himself. He assured her that he should not, being accustomed to all kinds of weather. "His surtout won't spoil," said one of the dandies, in a voice of affected tenderness; "and besides, my dear, the cloak will hold you both." The widow blushed; and the young gentleman turning quickly around, addressed the speaker in a tone of dignity which I shall never forget. "I am not naturally quarrelsome, sir; but yet it is quite possible you may provoke me too far." Both the exquisites immediately turned as pale as death; shrunk in spite of themselves into their natural insignificance; and scarcely opened their lips, even to each other, during the remainder of the journey.

In the meantime the young gentleman, with the same politeness and delicacy as if he had been assisting a lady of quality with her shawl, proceeded to wrap the widow and her baby in his cloak. He had hardly accomplished this when a smart shower of rain, mingled with hail, commenced. Being myself provided with a cloak, the cape of which was sufficiently large to envelope and protect my head, I offered the young gentleman my umbrella, which he readily accepted, but held it, as I remarked, in a manner better calculated to defend the widow than himself.

When we reached West Craigs Inn, the second stage from Edinburgh, the rain had ceased; and the young gentleman politely returning me my umbrella, began to relieve the widow of his now dripping cloak, which he shook over the side of the coach, and afterwards hung on the rail to dry. Then turning to the widow, he inquired if she would take any refreshments; and upon her answering in the negative, he proceeded to enter into conversation with her as follows:—

"Do you travel far on this road, ma'am?"

"About sixteen miles farther, sir. I leave the coach six miles on the other side of Airdrie."

"Do your friends dwell thereabouts?"

"Yes, sir, they do. Indeed, I am on the way home to my father's house."

"In affliction, I fear."

"Yes, sir," said the poor young woman, raising her handkerchief to her eyes, and sobbing audibly; "I am returning to him a disconsolate widow, after a short absence of two years."

"Is your father in good circumstances?"

"He will never suffer me or my baby to want, sir, while he has strength to labor for us; but he is himself in poverty, a day-laborer on the estate of the Earl of Hyndeford."

At the mention of that nobleman's name, the young gentleman colored a little, but it was evident that his emotion was not of an unpleasant nature. "What is your father's name?" said he.

"James Anderson, sir."

"And his residence?"

"Blinkbonny."

"Well, I trust, that though desolate as far as this world is concerned, you know something of Him, who is Father of the fatherless and the Judge of the widow. If so, your Maker is your husband, and the Lord of Hosts is His name."

"O! yes, sir, I bless God, that through a pious parent's care, I know something of the power of Divine grace, and the consolation of the Gospel. My husband, too, though but a tradesman, was a man who feared God above many."

"The remembrance of that must tend much to alleviate your sorrow."

"It does, indeed, sir, at times; but at other times I am ready to sink. My father's poverty and advancing age, my baby's helplessness, and my own delicate health, are frequently too much for my feeble faith."

"Trust in God, and He will provide for you; be assured He will."

By this time the coach was again in motion, and though the conversation continued for some time, the noise of the wheels prevented me from hearing it distinctly. I could see the dandies, however, exchange expressive looks with one another; and at one time the more forward of the two whispered something to his companion in which the words "Methodist parson," alone were audible.

At Airdrie nothing particular occurred; but when we had got about half-way between that town and Glasgow, we arrived at a cross-road, where the widow expressed a wish to get down. The young gentleman therefore desired the driver to stop, and springing himself from the coach, took the infant from her arms, and then, along with the guard, assisted her to descend. "May God reward you," said she, as he returned the baby to her, "for your kindness to the widow and fatherless this day!"

"And may He bless you," replied he, "with all spiritual consolation in Christ Jesus!"

So saying, he slipped something into her hand; the widow opened it instinctively; I saw two sovereigns glitter on her palm; she dropped a tear upon the money, and turned round to thank her benefactor; but he had already resumed his seat upon the coach. She cast towards him an eloquent and grateful look, pressed her infant convulsively to her bosom, and walked hurriedly away.

No other passenger wishing to alight at the same place, we were soon again in rapid motion towards the great emporium of the West of Scotland. Not a word was spoken. The young gentleman sat with his arms crossed upon his breast; and, if I might judge by the expression of his fine countenance, was evidently revolving some scheme of benevolence in his mind. The dandies regarded him with blank amazement. They also had seen the gold in the poor widow's hand, and seemed to think that there was more under that shabby surtout than their "puppy brains" could easily conjecture. That in this they were right was speedily made manifest.

When we had entered Glasgow, and were approaching the Buck's Head—the inn at which our conveyance was to stop—an open travelling carriage, drawn by four beautiful grey horses, drove up in an opposite direction. The elegance of this equipage made the dandies spring to their feet. "What beautiful greys!" cried the one, "I wonder who they can belong to?" "He is a happy fellow anyhow," replied the other; "I would give half Yorkshire to call her mine." The stage coach and travelling-carriage stopped at the Buck's Head at the same moment; and a footman in laced livery, springing down from behind the latter, looked first inside and then at the top of the former, when he lifted his hat with a smile of respectful recognition.

"Are all well at the castle, Robert?" inquired the young gentleman in the surtout.

"All well, my lord," replied the footman.

At the sound of that monosyllable the faces of the exquisites became visibly elongated; but without taking the smallest notice of them or of their confusion, the nobleman politely wished me good morning; and descended from the coach, caused the footman to place his cloak and despised portmanteau in the carriage. He then stepped into it himself; and the footman getting up behind, the coachman touched the leader very slightly with his whip, and the equipage and its noble owner was soon out of sight.

"Pray, what nobleman is that?" said one of the dandies to the landlord, as we entered the inn.

"The Earl of Hyndeford, sir," replied the landlord; "one of the best men as well as one of the richest in Scotland."

"The Earl of Hyndeford!" repeated the dandy, turning to his companion. "What asses we have been! there's an end to all chance of being allowed to shoot on his estate."

"O! yes we may burn our letters of introduction when we please," rejoined his companion; and silent and crest-fallen, both walked upstairs to their apartments.

"The Earl of Hyndeford!" repeated I, with somewhat less painful feelings; "does he often travel unattended?"

"Very often, sir," replied the landlord, especially when he has any public or charitable object in view; he thinks he gets at the truth more easily as a private gentleman than as a wealthy nobleman."

"I have no doubt of it," said I, and having given orders for dinner, I sat down to muse on the occurrences of the day.

THOMAS W. SMITH,
Fredericton, June 12. Proprietor.

THE ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY, 92 Lombard-street, London, and Royal Insurance buildings, Liverpool.
Chairman of the London Board.—Samuel Baker, Esq.
Chairman in Liverpool.—Charles Turner, Esq.
The Royal Insurance Company is one of the largest Offices in the kingdom.
At the Annual Meeting held in August 1859, the following highly satisfactory results were shown:—

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The most gratifying proof of the expansion of the business is exhibited in the one following fact—that the increase alone of the last three years exceeds the entire business of some of the existing and of many of the recently defunct fire insurance companies of this kingdom.

The Premiums for the year 1855 being.....	£130,060
While the Premiums for the year 1858 are....	196,148
Showing an actual increase of.....	66,088

or upwards of 50 per cent. in three years.
The recent returns of duty made by Government for this latter year (1858) again show the "Royal" as more than maintaining the ratio of its increase as stated in former years. Only one among the London insurance offices exhibits an advance to the extent of one-half the increase of the Company, while all the others respectively fall far short of the moiety of its advance.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.

The amount of new Life Premiums received this year is by far the largest received in any similar period since the commencement of the business, and must far exceed the average of amount received by the most successful offices in the kingdom. The number of policies issued in the year was 852, the sum assured £387,752 6s. 8d., and the premium £12,254 8s. 4d. These figures show a very rapid extension of business during the last ten years. Thus:—

Years.	No. of Policies.	Sums Assured.	New Premiums.
1848 ..	98	£48,764 17 0	£1,380 9 1
1850 ..	190	95,650 9 11	2,927 4 7
1852 ..	422	181,504 10 6	5,828 5 10
1854 ..	408	161,848 13 4	4,894 16 0
1856 ..	703	297,569 16 8	8,850 3 11
1858 ..	852	387,752 6 8	12,554 3 4

The remarkable increase in the business of the last four years, is mainly consequent upon the large bonus declared in 1855, which amounted to no less than £2 per cent. per annum on the sums assured and averaged 89 per cent. upon the premiums paid.

Saint John Building Society
AND INVESTMENT FUND.
IN SHARES OF $200 EACH.
Entrance Fee 50 cents, and Transfer Fee 50 cents each per Share.
Subscribed Capital, - - - $250,000.
And is being constantly increased.
THIS Society will consist of an indefinite number of Shares of the ultimate value of $200 each. In the issue of this Stock peculiar inducements are offered to capitalists and others seeking a perfectly safe and remunerative rate of interest, free from the anxiety and doubt incident to investments requiring constant watchfulness, and to enable every one who can save from their income to invest periodically that portion of their savings which overlaps current charges in a common Fund.
Money is received on Deposit from those who do not wish to invest periodically, for which Interest is paid in January and July, at the rate of 8⅓ per Cent. per Annum.
Advances are made to members (only) to buy, build, or redeem property, upon the security of approved Real Estate, repayable by easy monthly instalments.
Present amount advanced to members, $151,300.
Investing Shares may be taken up at any time, to mature in ten years. Bonus profits belong to these Shares.
