It is not at all congenial to our feelings to have to call very often upon our subscribers for the amounts due by them, and for this reason we sometimes defer doing so longer than is wise. A very trifling and seemingly harmless neglect on the part of our patrons in remitting their subscriptions, is often a source of no little anxiety and embarassment to us. While to each subscriber it is a very small matter indeed, the aggregate is an important sum, and necessary to the carrying on of our business. We should not write this could we avoid it, for, we repeat, it is everything compels people to resort to means repugnant to their creed by the late Central Junta, they proceeded to feelings, which happens to be our case just now. We need funds.
