ALL ONE IN CHRIST.

BY GEN. O'HALLORAN.

"For by one Spirit we are all baptized into one body."-1 Cor. xii. 16.

"And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul .- Acts iv. 82. Lord, I would humbly daily sit, Like loving Mary at thy feet, Seeking in faith to know thee more, And serve thee better than before.

> Oh, give an understanding heart To choose, like her, "the better part," That heavenly wisdom from above, Whose essence and whose source is LOVE.

Teach me my temper to control-Teach me humility of soul, Which never seeks to cause distress By acts or words of bitterness.

But under trial calm and meek, Feeling in self how very weak; Feeling in self how much of sin, Is only stern to faults within.

Dear friends in Jesus, let not strife Thus daily grieve the "Lord of life ;" "I" of Apollos-"I" of Paul-There is ONE ONLY WAY for "all,"

Baptized by one life-giving SPIBIT, Both Jew and Gentile, bond and free, ONE faith-one hope-one only MERIT-ONE holy temple, LORD, TO THEE.

May LOVE increasingly go on, Till all of self and sect be gone; And ev'ry saint of God be there Whate'er his form of worship here.

CHRIST in the heart, CHRIST in the creed, Why should we 'forms' and 'rubries' heed ' Strong in the one foundation stone, The UNITY IN TEUTH ALONE !

Sprit of truth, Spirit of grace, Grant unto all who seek thy face, 'That we may feel in sweet accord Our oneness in our " Saviour Lord."

Miscellaneous.

"I do not know what is to become of us; the money that is left, is not enough to keep us, and I cannot see what what we are to do." And again Ernest said, "Lean on me, mother > dear." He left school directly, though he had hoped to stay several years longer, and then go to college. That idea, however, was given up at once, and Ernest tried to get a situation. His teachers all recommended him, and Ernest had so many friends to speak good words for him that he had no difficulty. He became a clerk in an office. At first, of course, he did not receive much money, but only a fortnight passed before the gentleman who employed him said, "He is so diligent and clever that he can do a man's work, and therefore he shall receive a man's salary." Think of that! He was able to provide his mother with the comforts which she had been used to, and even more. God prospered Ernest Fletcher, because he feared Him, and always put his mother first. Once he had a large sum of money offered him if he would go abroad. He thought he would very well like to do so; but his mother said she did not wish to go, and Ernest gave it up directly. But he lost nothing by it. Whatever he did was successful, and even when he was quite a young man he was able to buy a carriage for his mother to ride in. He was a very good man, and when his mother grew quite old, she died blessing him. As for Ernest, he lived a great many years, and won the respect and love of all who knew him. Do you know why? There was one commandment which he never forgot, "Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

I believe the boy came to steal. Why else did he creep into the kitchen window without knocking? Pet was sitting there in one of her thoughtful moods. I could see through the side window, though the luxuriant grape-vine hid me completely from view. At first sight the boy startled me. He was uncouth; he was ugly. Not only that, but his brow was low, and to me his eye was vicious. Some children would have screamed at the sight of such an apparition; Pet did not. Instead, a smile broke over her face like a burst of sunshine.

Nothing human repulsed her. I have shuddered to see her clasp a filthy little creature round the neck. Everybody was "nice" with her, and in her vocabulary "nice" meant good.

But to go back to the rough intruder. It startled him to see her smile, but in an instant the boy looked ashamed. A flush spread to the purplish swellings under his eyes. "Is 'oo hungry ?" cried Pet, in a clear, small, bird- MALACCA CANES .-- Fine Malacca Walking Sticks, "Is 'oo hungry ?" cried Pet, in a clear, small, bird-

" If you remain as you are now, my son, I think you will be," said his mother. "I hope that God will spare you to become a good man, and to live an upright life, so that your mother may never have to weep over your wrong-doing."

"I hope so too, mother," said Ernest, thoughtfully. This was when he was about ten years old.

When he was twelve his father died. It is a sad Never. thing to lose one's father, and Ernest felt it so. But I think it is sadder still for some boys when the mother dies. Ernest had his mother left, and as he stood by his father's grave he thanked God for that.

" Dear mother, she has only me left now," he said to himself. "I will be all I can to her. I will try to make up as much as possible for my father's loss.' When he went home he found his mother on the sofa weeping bitterly.

Ernest went to her, and put his arms around her, and lifted her head on his shoulder.

* "Dear mother, don't cry," he said. " Lean on me. I will try to be a good son to you always." And his words comforted his mother, and made her sorrow the easier to bear. Besides, he kept his word. He took his mother out when she wished to go; he stayed at home when she preferred doing so. He saved her as many steps as he could; he almost knew what she wanted before she asked for it, because he watched her so anxiously.

She used to say sometimes : " O, Ernest, I do not know what I should do without my son."

When he was fourteen years old another trouble happened to his mother. Nearly all the money that she had was lost. * She had given it to some one to take care of for her, and through some carelessness the money was wasted. She was very much distressed about it.

As for Pet, do you think I ever wished her back ?

My waiting angel-my seraph guide to the court of heaven! My one little child, that never gave the heart that loved her a single pang! " Of such is the kingdom," and with such my blessed darling is safe for evermore.

TRUE SUCCESS .- Final success-the joy of life's ripe harvest-is the goal of our human hopes. No wise or thoughtful man will live merely for to day. The pilgrim who seeks a home is not content to lin ger and loiter for the mere flowers beside his way. The sower looks onward to fields white and ready for the sickle. Wisdom has regard to the grand issue. The triumph or the pleasure of to-day is transitory. We want a hope that does not sink with the setting sun. The true success in life is that which does not our barrenness. We want that shout of "harvest home" that will not die with the fainting breath, but make the passage of the grave a whispering gallery where heaven and earth talk together. We want someting that will reach beyond time-beyond the of eternity
