Poetry.

MY TIMES ARE IN THY HAND.

Father, I know that all my life Is portioned out for me; And the changes that are sure to come,

I do not fear to see; But I ask thee for a present mind

Intent on pleasing thee,

1 ask thee for a thankful love, Through constant watching wise, To meet the glad with joyful smiles, And to wipe the weeping eyes, And a heart at leisure from itself, To soothe and sympathize.

I would not have the restless will That hurries to and fro, Seeking for some great thing to do, Or secret thing to know ; I would be dealt with as a child, And guided where to go.

Wherever in the world I am, In whatsoe'er estate, I have a fellowship with hearts, To keep and cultivate; And a work of holy love to do, For the Lord on whom I wait.

I ask thee for the daily strength, To none that ask denied ; And a mind to blend with outward life, While keeping at thy side ; Content to fill a little space, If thou be glorified.

And of some things I do not ask, In my cup of blessing be, I would have my spirit filled the more With grateful love to thee-More careful than to serve thee much, To please thee perfectly. There are briers besetting every path, That call for patient care ; There is a crook in every lot, And a need for earnest prayer But a lowly heart that leans on thee, Is happy everywhere.

In a service that thy love appoints, There are no bonds for me, For my secret beart is taught the truth That makes thy children " free ;"

their sides, and the clumsy muskets which they carried in those days over their shoulders, while the Indians, with tattooed limbs, and faces painted with three or four colors, had buge bows and arrows as weapons.

Just before they reached the top of the wooded ridge from which the Indians said they would see two oceans, Balboa made his companions pause that he might climb the steep alone, and so be the first Spaniard who should look upon the promised sca. Obediently remaining, they left him to climb the lost few yards without them. In a few moments more he gained the summit, and looking southward, beheld the broad expanse-the waters of the longdreamed-of "South Sea," which lay smiling and blue almost at his feet. Standing there, he could see both oceans only a few miles apart. The grand sight overcame him, and the Spanish warrior, bronzed with conflict with seas and storms, hardened with exposure and contact with many dangers, fell prone on the earth and wetted it with his tears. Then calling to his soldiers he commenced descending toward the new-found ocean. When he reached the shore he walked knee-deep in the waters, and waving above them his cross-hilted sword, he took possession of the ocean "in the name of God, for the use of the sovereign majesty of Spain."

From the shores of the ocean the Indians pointed him southward to a country which bore gold as their land yielded corn in the harvest-time-thus giving to the white discoverers their first knowledge of Peru, where, a few years later, Pizarro revelled in the treasures of the Incas.

Sixty years after the scene we have just described, the desire for the South Sea was as great as ever. In this time, Magellan, in 1520, had discovered a southwest passage through the straits which bear his name. He first gave the South Sea the name of the Pacific ocean, from the peaceful waters which he reached after passing through the stormy entrance of the straits, and losing one of his ships in a gale. And whether to propitiate the scolding fury of the waters, or to find favor with the female saints in one grand mass, I cannot tell, but he called the stormy passage, between Terra del Fuego and the main land, Straits of the Eleven Thousand Virgins.

In 1573, the Pacific ocean was very little better known than when Magellan sailed into its waters, and no English ship had ever made the southwest passage. In that year Sir Francis Drake sailed into the Gulf of Mexico, to the great alarm of Spanish colonists and Spanish argosies, to whom his name was becoming a terror.

He landed at Darien, and was received with open

He, the great "soul and father of them all," died without at all realizing the vastness of his discovery, and, in his very last voyage, sailed all around the Gulf of Mexico, which he called a sea, up and down the coast of Gautemala and the Isthmus, trying to find a strait through the land, that he might sail on to the Indies. But, of course, he was unsuccessful; so, leaving a little colony, he returned to Spain to die.

This colony was soon abandoned, and in 1510 another attempt was made to inhabit this part of the sary from Spain, who was envious of his growing continent by a party of settlers under Ojidu, a Spanish captain.

EISMARE! PRUSSIA!! THE KING!!! Our correspondent informs us that "when this report was published, there was general joy in Breslau and Berlin." In 24 hours after the great purity of this medicine was made known, there was not a box of Radway's Pills to be obtained at the agency. Count Bismark ordered a supply, and it is stated in dip.omatic circles that his suldon recovery is owing to them. They are now the acknowledged Pills of the Royal Family It is a comfort to know that the poor man for 25 cents, can be cured with the same medicine that cures kings and their prime ministers of their ills.

Price of Dr. Radway's Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for one dollar. Principal office. 87 Maiden Lans, N. Y Sold by Druggists, Grocers and Country Morchants. N. B .- Each pill is elegantly coated with sweet want and parfectly tasteless.
