Poetry.

THE INFIDEL AND HIS DAUGHTER. RECITED BY SABAH BIGGAR. "The damps of death are coming fast, My father, o'er my brow; The past, with all its scenes has fled, And I must turn me now To that dim future which in vain My eyes seek to descry ; Tell me, my father, in this bour, In whose belief to die.

" In thine? I've watched the scornful smile, And heard thy withering tone, Whene'er the Christian's humble hope Was placed above thine own ? I've heard thee speak of coming death, Without a shade of gloom, And laugh at all the childish fears, That cluster round the tomb.

"Or is it in my mother's faith ? How fondly do I trace,

Through many a weary long year past That calm and saintly face ? How often do I call to mind, Now she's beneath the sod, The place, the hour, in which she drew My early thoughts to God.

"T'was then she took this sacred book, And from its burning page Read how its truths support the soul In youth and failing age; And bade me in its precepts live, And by its precepts die, That I might share a home above In worlds beyond the sky.

" My father, shall I look above, Amid this gathering gloom, To him whose promises of love Extend beyond the tomb? Or curse the Being who hath blessed, This checkered path of mine ? Must I embrace my mother's faith, Or die, my sire, in thine."

The frown upon that warrior brow Passed like a cloud away, And tears coursed down the rugged cheek That flowed not till that day, " No, not in mine !" with choking voice, The sceptic made reply-

she knew he would not voluntarily have stayed for a night from his child. Finding herself alone, Adele called her dog, and filled with anxiety for her father, showed Fidele a coat belonging to him, bidding the sagacious animal to seek him. Instantly be set forth, LESS THAN COST. and Adele with him. The fresh, dewy morning, the cool flower-scented air, and the songs of the birds, all combined to make the little girl feel relieved of half her fears ; and she ran gaily on, talking to her dumb companion of her father's delight when he should see them coming to meet him, and then burst forth into As the Subscriber intends devoting his whole a song of joy, like a bird set free.

ADELE'S HYMN. " In the Lord, I'll place my trust, Knowing that his power must Win the victory; For His arm is strong to save; He had triumphed o'er the grave; Death shall no more dominion have ; Christ hath set us free ! Free ! Free ! We are forever free !

Welcome woes for Christ's dear name : Welcome suffering, welcome shame, If for Him they come. Welcome dungeons, dark and drear! Death itself can bring no fear, If the risen Christ is near, And will take us home ! Home ! Home ! Forever at home.

For some time they proceeded along the high road ; but at length the dog turned off into what Adele could feel to be a woodland path. Along this they burried for a considerable distance, when the path began to descend rapidly. Adele now recognized it as a small but very deep glen, which, from its extreme seclusion, was often chosen by the Huguenots, as the place of their secret meetings for worship. Soon she For less than Cosr, till the whole Stock heard voices, and in another moment the welcome tones of her father reached her ear. She urged her dog forward, and bursting through the underbrush she cried, "Father! father! I have found you at last."

"Adele ! oh, merciful Father, my child ! my child !" came in tones of agony from Gerard's lips; but Adele scarcely heard, for her trusty guide had led her close the 2d day of December, inst. to her father's side, and her arms were around his neck, her face hidden on his breast. But it was in no peaceful congregation that Adele had found her father. He was kneeling with his arms secured behind him, at the foot of a giant tree, and opposite stood a file of soldiers, with their weapons levelled full upon him. Two priests were the only other persons present. On the morning before, Gerard had been captured by the soldiers, who were lying in wait for him near to the glen. The messenger, being a strict Catholic, had been easily induced by the priests to betray the poor carpenter into their hands; and his work was done effectually. Gerard was hurried to a house in the neighborhood, where, after being examined by the priest, and proving firm in his refusal to give up his faith, he was condemned to be shot the next day, on the very spot where he had so often led in the worship of God. His body was to be left where it fell, as a warning to the rest of the villagers. At the moment that Adele appeared, the poor martyr was making his last prayer to God for his blind and helpless child so soon to be an orphan. " My darling ! my darling !" he cried, "my poor, hepless little one !" and his tears and kisses covered her fair, innocent face. "Papa, why do you not put your arms around me? Why do you kneel here so strangely ?" questioned the child, a vague terror stealing over her. "Are you not praying with the congregation, papa ?" Before Gerard could answer, one of the priests approached and tried to lead her away, saying, harshly, "Your father is a heretic, girl; and he has taught Garonne, near to its fountain-head; and the inhabi-tants were a gentle, kindly people, uniting the care-gation, but an execution. Do you understand, or must I tell you more plainly ? Your father is to be shot, and unless you come away, a bullet will find vou too. Come away, I say." But she clung more closely to him, sobbing, " Are dwelt a carpenter, called Gerard Aurillac. His wife they going to kill you, my papa? oh, let me die with you! Do not leave me; I have no one but you-no one but you.' "My darling! my darling! you have Jesus !" cried the almost distracted man; "Oh, God, have mercy on my poor, poor child !" Suddenly, with a quick motion which Gerard saw not, the priest, who had not yet spoken, gave the signal for which alone the soldiers waited; and the fully and zealously he had preached the doctrines he ten carbines were fired simultaneously. With one held, and when he departed, more than one among last cry of "Oh, God! my child," Gerard fell on his those simple people had exchanged the errors of side, his little daughter still clinging to him. The soldiers rushed forward, and found them both dead. pierced by the bullets, some of which had passed through both. Owing to Adele lying on his breast, the wounds in Gerard's body would not have been fatal, had not one of the soldiers, more merciful than his fellows, raised his weapon and sent the onerring bullet through the poor man's temple, causing a death as instantaneous as had been that of his child. And there the villagers found them, even as they fell; the strong, brave man, and, on his breast, the gentle, they carved the simple cross which marks the spot. Above, a crown, with this inscription around it : " Here lies Gerard Aurillac, the martyr; a faithful follower of Jesus Christ, and a member of the Hugueot church.

CAUTION! CAUTION! CAUTION! THE Proprietor of PICKSTONE'S WASHING AND CLEANSING CRYSTAL, deems it his duty to cau. tion the public against spurious imitations of his highly celebrated Washing Crystal, which is the most harmless compound extant. It is free from Lime, Vitriol, and all other deadly mixtures so common to be found amongst washing compounds. Try Pickstone's Washing Ciystal, if you want ease, comfort, and economy in washing, which GOUDS washes every thing, and has rapid sale. It will be found invaluable for the following domestic The Subscribers have received the greater portion Lace, Crotchet Work, Baby Linen, &c,; cleaning Sponges, Combs, and Brushes; removing stains from the hands, and grease from Carpets, Cloth, Flannel, &c. It makes Hard Water Soft, and may be used with good effect in Baths, as it immediately removes all condensed perspiration from the skin. A small quantity should also be used in the foot pan. It forms a cooling and cleansing wash for the head. by dissolving a teaspnonful of the Crystal in a quarter of a pint of water ; and for cleansing the Mouth, Teeth, and Gums, it is quite a luxury, by adding a teaspoonful to a tumbler of water. It renders linen beautifully white, and unlike other preparations, at the same time preserves the fabric. It contains nothing injurious to life. A child eat. ing it by mistake, will not be injured.

If you have not used this Cleansing Crystal, lose no time in obtaining it. Nothing has ever been introduced into this country which has effected such a wonderful change upon Washing Days. It saves your time-saves your clothes-saves your money; and it does not injur the most delicate hands. Pickstone's Cleansing Crysta makes washing a pleasure, reduces the cost of fuel, the wear and tear of labor, and improves every article washed. For Linens, and heavy washes, it cannot be surpassed for Laces, and fine fabrics, it is unequalled. It does no injure the color of Prints, but str engthens and improv them--by its use they retain their original brilliancy. Flar nels become white and soft like new. White things an much improved, and keep their color, even if put by fo inonths. Thousands of Families made happy! No misery on a Washing Day, with Pickstone's Cleansing Crystal. Miscellaneous.

THE LILY OF ST. CROIX.

In the South of France, buried among the mountains of Auvergne, lay the little village of St. Croix. It was a beautiful spot, on the north bank of the fair less, buoyant glee of the children of the South, with much of the fortitude and steadfast courage of the sons of the mountains. In this secluded hamlet has been long dead, and he lives with his only child, and her faithful nurse, in a little cottage on the outskirts of the village, nearest to the mountains.

Many years before our story opens, a minister of the Huguenot faith had found refuge from persecution among the hospitable inhabitants of St. Croix. Faith-Rome for the faith of the suffering Huguenots.

Foremost among these was Gerard Aurillac and his wife; and their little girl received the rite of baptism from the hands of the good minister. At the time of her mother's death, little Adele had just completed her fourth year. An old woman, who had always lived in her mother's family, and who, during her illness, had taken charge of the little household, remained with them, and gave, as far as she was able, a mother's care to the little girl. But it was her father who became her instructor, companion and nurse. She was always at his side in the workshop; her meals were taken on his knee; and she slept nestled in his bosom. During his walks she was seldom absent, clinging to his hand, and when weary dying on his breast -- Adde, the gentle Lily of St. seated on his shoulder or carried in his strong arms. Croix. From his lips she learned the simple Huguenot hymns, with their wild, sweet tunes, which she carolled forth in her fresh young voice of exquisite melody. Often her father would join his deep tones to her silvery notes, and the kindly villagers would say, as they paused to listen, "It is Gerard Aurillac and his little blind girl singing praises to God."

Yes, little Adele was blind. Not once had she seen the blue sky and the bright stars above her head, or the green grass, sprinkled with many colored flowers, beneath her feet. Her beautiful blue eyes, with their long dark lashes, had never seen her always wore for her. She was very fair, with soft of lotteries, the writing of bad books, and other simi- pany, while all the others respectively fall far short of the brown curls, and such a gentle smile, and pure white | lar evils which have disgraced the country these few brow, that she was known throughout the hamlet by years past. SUSPICIOUS FELLOWS.

I am well acquainted with a gang of fellows who have done more mishief than any other equal number of characters I ever saw. I know that it reflects on myself to claim intimacy with them, but I can't help that now. It is a well-known fact that I am very intimate with them. Not a day passes but I am seen in their company.

These fellows have had to do with a great deal of crime and mischief. They have been parties to all the forgeries, the counterfeiting, the making of bogus checks, the advertising of humbugs, the getting up advance to the extent of one-half the increase of the Comcharged with their offences, and they are so sharp After her mother's death, Gerard had, with much that they have never been arrested by any police-

She would hold fast to the are as straight as bean poles, some crocked as ram's chain attached to his neck, and show him some arti- horns, some round-shouldered, and others humpcle belonging to her father, when trusty Fidele would backed. They wear more dresses than play actors, and appear in all colors, though most of them prefer black. Bad as they seem, they are not all badness, for they are as useful as they are wicked. They gave valuable assistance to Noah Webster in the compilaof his big dictionary; and I have heard it said that without their help his spelling-book would have been a failure. It is reported, too, that the late Mr. Lincoln consulted them when preparing his famous emancipation proclamation. Stranger than all this is the fact that they render great service to the Bible societies and missionaries; and there are few ministers who are not largely in their debt.

When Adele was about eight years of age, the persecutions against the Huguenots was carried on with redoubled violence. It soon became known that the hamlet of St. Croix was devoted to the reformed faith; and that the good cure having been himself a Huguenot in secret, was the reason of its "unusual freedom from persecution. He was a good, but weak old man, who dared not confess his opinions openly; and at his death the people had continued to meet for worship, which was conducted by Gerard Aurillac. This was soon discovered, and news brought to Gerard that they were seeking his life.

It was on a clear bright morning in June, that a man came up to the carpenter's little cottage, saying were not led into it by others. It is their misfortune that a wealthy gentleman, who lived about five miles distant, had sent for him to execute a piece of work, which would not take him more than a few hours. The messenger was known to Gerard as a workman in the gentleman's employment, so he at once prepared to accompany him. Telling his little girl that he would be back before sunset, he bade her a fond good-bye, and swinging his tools on his shoulders, set forth at a rapid pace.

Sunset came and passed, and still Gerard did not selves into servants of the evil one. return. Little Adele looked in vain for his coming, and strained her ear to catch his well-known footsteps; she was obliged at length to cat her supper and go to bed without him. It was the first time he you choose, and send them on wicked errands all had ever been absent at night, and her little heart felt desolate and lonely. She would not consent to share old Jacintha's couch, but crept to her accustomed place, saying, "he will come before morning, I know you will put yourselves? What kind of work will he will come before morning."

It was long ere she slept, and when she awoke the sun was already up. She rose and called for Jacin- selves servants of the living God .- Sunday School tha; but the old woman thinking her sleep too sound 1 Advocate.
