"I will strengthen thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." "Without me ye can do nothing ;" but, " My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness." Take courage, Christian, as you listen to these cheering assurances of the most high God, and rejoice that he is able to "supply all your need, according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." For remember, the strength which his promises guarantee to you is adequate strength. "As thy days, so shall thy strength be ;" the one fully commensurate with the other. Your present necessities and your future wants might well fill you with distress and apprehension, did not God stand engaged to prepare you for every emergency, and to sustain you under every burden. But since the omnipotent Creator has pledged himself to furnish his people with whatever spiritual energy they require in their perpetual conflict, you may gratefully exclaim with the Psalmist, "The Lord is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer; my God, my strength, in whom I will trust." Let no misgivings disturb your mind, as you think of approaching and augmented trials ; for with the increased demand for strength, you may safely calculate upon an increased supply. God will never call you to the fulfilment of any duty, nor the strength sufficient for the occasion. Each season of renewed solicitude will bring with it its own appointed strength. Then day by day, hour by hour, trust in Him, and look to Him.

And the strength which our heavenly Father grants unto his children, is appropriate strength. The days of the spiritual life are as varied as the days of the natural life. Sometimes they are bright with hope and prosperity ; sometimes they are dark with disappointment and sorrow. There are days when our path lies through green and flowery meadows : and there are days when our road is through a tangled forest, or along the edge of a precipice. At one time we have to toil up the Hill Difficulty ; at another, to fight our way through the Valley of the Shadow of Death. Now there is a beautiful adaptation in God's grace to the diversified circumstances of his people's history. Have you not found it to be so, dear reader ? Have you not felt, in time of need, that there was an exact minuteness in God's gracious dealings with you ; that there was a delicate adjustment in the bestowal of his varied gifts ? Expect the same considerateness in his conduct still. Believe that the strength which he prepares for you is suita- in the Lord. Trust, then, in God ! ble, as well as sufficient.

What day is it with you now? dear reader. Is it the day of mental depression ? The infirmities and sufferings of the body often affect the mind. They cast a gloom over the spirits, and throw a shadow over our prospects. Well, there is One who knoweth our frame, and remembereth that we are dust and he can support and strengthen our disturbed and fearful spirits. We need not be ashamed to disclose to him our mental weakness, he feels for his children to the faint; and to them that have no might, he increaseth strength." the mark for the prize of your high calling? Do your enemies seem to increase ? and is your own heart inyou." you When heart and flesh shall faint and fail, he ral complaint was the great lack of ministerial labor. | Nashwaak, Sept. 30th, 1869.

TRUST IN GOD.

There has ever been a vast machinery of effort in motion calculated to be the means of blessing the church. There are agencies in her midst which, when wisely used, accomplish mighty results. The ministry of the Word is a lever by which guilty men God, a place where many are trained up in the fear of the Lord, and where youthful hearts are taught to devote themselves to Christ. The labors of the various missionaries are continually growing more successful, and are every day telling more largely upon world. Thus in a thousand different ways God is the using feeble means to bring about the mightiest results. And He would not be pleased were these instrumentalities undervalued, as there is scarcely a purpose in either nature or providence that He accomplishes without. There is danger, however, that are not over-estimated. It should not be forgotten that after all they are but the mechanism, and unless there is a power to set them in motion, they are all in vain. Ministers and churches are endurance of any trial, without first giving you both in danger. When, as is sometimes the case, a minister makes up his mind that because his congregation is respectable and well-to-do, he can afford to sit down in comfort and ease, and forgets that his strength cometh from God alone, he must of necessity grow weak, and become powerless for good. On the same principle, when the church is satisfied to rely upon the eloquence or power of the minister, and neglects to look upward to the Great Spirit as the fountain of all strength and the giver of all success, she sinks beneath her dignity, and dishonours her name. Instead of being as a city set upon a hill, whose light cannot be hid, she falls to the foot of the mountain, her light having become dim, and being anything short of the ministrations of the Holy Spir- some parts of Carleton Co., to try and labor for it, there must inevitably be weakness. THE WAYSIDE HEARER.

As for "John Allen"-whose real name, by the way, is Evart E. Van Allen-he seems to have been but a wayside hearer, for a "fowl of the air," in the thing to seize him was the idea that he could run for the Assembly.
