THE TALLENT SHOOTING CASE. - George Tallent, who has been in jail since the shooting of the girl Lavina Hector at a house in Princess Street, on the 11th inst., was brought before the Police Court yesterday morning. It was reported that the girl was riage, and the case was postponed until this morning. Tallent states that the shooting was purely accidental. He says that he was cleaning the rifle, which was loaded, and while the muzzle was resting on the floor the sleeve of his flannel caught the hammer of the lock and exploded the charge. The same accident happened with the same rifle in the Police Station, and such may turn out to be the fact of the case after

Linda while lying in the harbor of Gloucester, Mass., on Thursday last had a pretty rough time of it. She had run well up the harbor and anchored, and during the day a schooner came drifting down upon her. As the two vessels were likely to collide, a few turns of the Linda's engine were given in order to send that the chain of one of the schooner's anchors was 2 o'clock, P.
