(From the Witness) THE NAME OF JESUS. Jesus, my Lord, in thee I trust, Thy rame to me is dear, 'Tis sweet, 'tis fragrant, full of charms, 'Tis music in my ear.

Like precious ointment poured forth, It yields the sweetest smell, Which all who know it, can't but love And sure, I love it well.

Thy name's upon me, Lord, always, In it I'll glory still; To me it is a tower of strength, In which I fear no ill.

Arise, O Lord, Thy name make known, In all the earth throughout, The nations bless-the people save, That all thy praise may shout.

(From the Methodist.) LITTLE AMY. BY MES. C. H. GARDNER.

"Look here, little one; where are you going?

You should not be on the street alone." Little Amy looked into the motherly face of the questioner, but she did not answer. She was a bashful little thing, only four years old. She scarcely looked three, she was so little.

He knew that all his earnings-and they were The following lines, written by Mr. Elisha Briggs not small-were spent in that vile room, and that the | a short time previous to his death, are inserted by cupboard at home was empty. So he sat still.

Little Amy leaned over his knees to get a little nearer to the dinner-pot, and then-can you blame the baby-thief ?- she reached out her poor little hand, and with her tiny fingers picked a bit of the cabbage. A heavy blow from the woman's strong hand would have sent her headlong on to the hearth, if her father had not caught her. "I'il tache ye to stale, ye beggar's brat," screamed the woman, catching hold of Amy's arm, and shaking her in spite of her father's hold on her.

He started up from his seat with a defiant look on his face that she had never seen there before. The man's soul was aroused.

"Let the child alone," he said. "Touch her again if you dare. Can ye no see that the lassie is starving the day ?" "An' who is to be blamed for that same, Terence

Maloney? Who but yerself, ye born fool?" "You say true, Meg Quillan," said the man, reaching for his hat, and buttoning his coat as he spoke. "An' it's the fool's wages as has paid for your cabbage this many a day. I'll do it no more. Coom, Amy, wisha; there'll be cabbage for yees at home after this; and mate too, I'm thinking." A derisive laugh followed him as he took the child in his arms and strode out of the house.

"He'll be back for his dram directly," said the woman, laughing. "It'll be a long day before he'll go to bed without that." But he did not come back. Day after day passed by and Terence Maloney did not once cross the vile threshold. Not a word did he say to his wife of his good resolutions. He watched her going and coming to her work with a worn and discouraged look on the face which was so bright and happy but six years ago; but he said nothing to cheer it until Saturday evening, when his wages for the week was paid.

Then, after sending home food and fuel, he entered his door with a feeling that he had recovered in part his lost manhood, and had a right to speak. Little Amy met him first. "O papa!" she exclaimed, "there's such a heap of good things come. But mammy says they can't belong to us." "Arrah, but they do belong to us, alannah. They're all yer own, Norah dear," he said to his wife, who was drearily looking at the different packages-"ivery one o' them. The paper you has the big cabbage for the dinner to-morrow. Ye'll not need to

"Ye need not spare, Norah," he went on. "There's work in me arm and the will in me heart. I'll kape ye both illegantly, niver fear." "Oh! thin, Terence, man," said Norah, bursting into a fit of mingled laughter and crying, " I'll jist die wi' joy." "No, ye won't nor of want, aither; you'll see.

It's the bit lassie's doing." And then he told the mother the pitiful story of little Amy's theft and punishment.

"I'll no' let you starve to buy cabbage for Meg Royal Insurance Company Quillan, the mane old critter !" he said, in conclusion. There was not a happier home in America than was Terence Maloney's on that Saturday night. And it is pleasant to record that it was no transient reform which he experienced. It is two years since he has entered a drinkinghouse, notwithstanding many a tempting offer of whiskey for nothing if he would return to his old corner at Meg Quillan's.

Norah lives at home like a lady, as she delares. There is no more going out in the cold mornings to wash for other people. She finds plenty of pleasant work at home; for little Amy has a baby brother now, who is the delight of her heart. He is a big fellow for a baby, after the pattern of Terence, his father-too heavy for her to lift, but a perpetual fountain of joy notwithstanding.

Best of all, her parents lead her quietly into the house of God on the holy Sabbath, and listen themselves, with unquestioning faith, to the saving truths of the gospel of Christ. This is the sweet promise of

I tell little Amy's story as I heard it myself, not a week ago, from a warm-hearted Irish woman, who is my friend. She is unlearned, and I have been ob liged to translate her brogue into plainer English, but I have given you the facts of the story without alter-

For the Religious Intelligencer.

Adieu, vain world, and all below, With all thine earthly charms; The Saviour calls! O, let me go To rest within His arms.

'Twas in the early days of life I learned his name to love; And now I wait, yea long, to be At home with Him above.

'Twas at the age of sixteen years, I felt my sins to roll, Like mountains they did weigh and press Upon my weary soul.

'Twas then that Jesus did appear-My glorious sacrifice-And spake these words into mine ear, "He that believes shall live."

From that time forth I tried to tell The glories of Immanuel; Unworthy though to speak His name, Yet still I found my Lord the same. Though many trials I had to meet, They for my good did prove; They brought me near to Jesus' feet -

O wondrous, matchless love. 'Twas at the age of nineteen years, I felt a call to know And tell poor souls of Jesus' love Wherever I should go.

But looking at myself to be Too mean for such a work, I stayed at home for three long years Employed at other work.

At last these words came to my mind-The Lord's pronounced a woe Upon the man that's called to preach, And yet refuse to go.

At last I threw the world aside, My trust alone in God, my guide, And started, with His word in hand, To preach His gospel all abroad.

But soon I was seized with a racking pain, Which brought me very low, And down into the dark, cold grave, I felt that I must go.

But still my Saviour is my friend; All glory to His name! He will be with me to the end-From Him that promise came.

But soon this dust shall rise again, For Christ has told us so; 'Tis then we'll in His likeness shine, Suffering no more to know.

And now, my friends, to you I turn, And give this last address: Believe in Christ and ye shall live, And in His promise rest.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

Perhans no one mediquired by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative son is, that it is a more reble and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always - that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug they may be taken with safety by anybody. Then sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity. They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derange-ments as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—
For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessmess, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action. For Liver Complaint and its various sy toms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be juciously taken for each case, to correct the disease tion or remove the obstructions which cause it. For Dysentery or Diarrhoea, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they uld be taken in large and frequent doses to pro duce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote direction and volices the stemach. mote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus. DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Practical Chemists, LOWELL. MASS., U. S. A. LONG'S HOTEL!
