Poetry.

THE PLOW, SPADE, AND HOE.

The following song was written for the Hingham Agricultural and Horticultural Society :

The Farmer 's the chief of the nation,
The oldest of nobles is he :
How blest beyond others his station,
From want and from envy how free!
His patent was granted in Eden,
Long ages and ages ago,
O the Farmer, the Farmer for ever,
Three cheers for the plow, spade, and hoe!

In April, when nature is waking,
And blue birds are fast on the wing,
His plows how the fallows are breaking,
Whence beautiful harvests shall spring ;
Then broadcast along the brown furrow
We hasten the good seed to sow,
O the Farmer, the Farmer for ever,
Three cheers for the plow, spade and hoe!

When summer in beauty is glowing,
With fresh, early morn he's away,
And skilfully guides he the mowing,
Or tosses the sweet-scented hay ;
Then casts him at noon by the brook-side,
Where gaily its bright waters flow,
O the Farmer, the Farmer for ever,
Three cheers for the plow, spade, and hoe!

But when in the clear Autumn weather
He reaps the reward of his care,
So busy and joyful together,
What monarch with him can compare?
His barns running over with plenty,
His trees with their fruit bending low,
O the Farmer, the Farmer for ever,
Three cheers for the plow, spade, and hoe!

Then sing me the life of a Farmer,
With comfort and health in his train,
And need not the voice of the charmer
That whispers of speedier gain—
With all the rich treasures 'tis teeming
That Heaven on its child can bestow,
O the Farmer, the Farmer forever,
Three cheers for the plow, spade, and hoe!

Miscellaneous.

[From the Methodist.]

THE WEEDS IN AUGUSTA'S GARDEN.

Augusta was an only child, for her two brothers had lately died of scarlet fever, which had raged for a number of weeks in the town of Bingen. She was a beautiful little girl, had as bright eyes as ever you saw, a quick mind, and was nearly always lively and cheerful. I do not much wonder that she was praised by everybody, for she behaved very well when she was in the company of others, and was always respectful to her parents and older persons.

Augusta's father was an officer in the army, and was compelled to be from home a great deal of his time. Her mother was very sickly ; and owing to these two causes, Augusta was very much neglected. Her parents did not know that she was beginning to be troubled with certain bad qualities which would seriously affect her in later life, for they thought that it would be well-nigh impossible that their well-behaved, cheerful, and respectful Augusta could ever be anything else than what she then was.

I must tell you about a particular fault which now began to spoil Augusta in the sight of others. She had been so highly complimented by everybody who knew her, and so many things were said even to her face in her praise, that she became vain and proud. She would often stand ten minutes at a time before the looking glass and admire her beauty, and when she went along the street, she would compare her clothes with those of other children, and would always conclude that she was the finest looking girl in the whole town. In due time her mother noticed that this fault grew upon her, and she studied a great many means to cure her of it. She knew that Augusta was very fond of hearing her relate stories ; and after praying that she might be directed to influence her child aright, and that she might be directed to some special means for curing her of her increasing fault, she remembered a circumstance that had taken place in her own life, and which seemed especially appropriate to Augusta's case.

One afternoon, Augusta went up on the hill, back of Rigen, to take a look at the beautiful country through which the Rhine flows. She saw a castle here and there, and the boats going up and down the Rhine, and the little island in the river where Bishop Hatto's old tower stands, and admired all that she saw. But she thought to herself, " Of all the girls in Bingen, I think I have the nicest clothes, and I think that people have said most things in my praise." These and a great many similar thoughts passed through her mind as she took the path leading down through the vineyards towards her home. When she reached it, she found her mother sitting out in the little summer house, and she had no sooner taken her seat than she asked her mother to tell her a story about the Rhine, or about anything that she liked.

This was now a favorable opportunity for Augusta's mother to teach the lesson for which she had been waiting. So she said to her : " Now, if I tell you a story, will you try to remember it ?"

" Yes, mother," she replied.

" Well, will you also try to see if the story fits you ?"

" Oh! yes, mother," replied Augusta.

" Now, if the story fits you, will you try to do better afterward ?"

" Yes, I will, mother."

So Augusta's mother related the following circumstance, with which she had herself been connected when she was quite young :

" When I was nine years old," said Augusta's mother, " I went to visit an uncle who lived in the beautiful city of Coblence, on the Rhine, where I stayed six or seven weeks. On leaving, he gave me twenty or thirty different kinds of flowers, and packed them all in a large basket, and brought them down to the Rhine boat as I was going to start for home. When I reached home, one of the first things that I did was to plant them in the garden, and I took great pains with them. There was one difficulty which I met with, however, and it seemed a very strange thing to me that I could not get clear of it. I found that the weeds grew faster among my flowers than they did in any other part of the garden, and though I tried in every way to learn the cause of it I could not do it for some time. So I finally went to old Jonas, who took care of my father's large garden, and I told him that my flowers were very beautiful, but that the weeds grew so fast among them that I could not make much progress. Old Jonas smiled, and looked just as if he knew the cause of it. So he said : 'Come, let us look at the flowers.'

" So I went with him, and we saw the weeds, which had grown at an enormous rate since the shower of three days before.

' Well,' said he, ' let me see what you will do with the weeds.'

" So I immediately took out of my pocket my little knife, and cut off three or four weeds even with the ground. That made old Jonas laugh aloud, and I must confess that I was a little provoked at his doing it.

" ' What is the matter with you, Uncle Jonas ?' said I. ' What makes you laugh when I cut down the weeds ?'

" ' Oh !' said he, ' you do not know how to treat the weeds, or they would not trouble you so much.'

" ' Well, but how do you treat your weeds, Uncle Jonas ? What can be better than a knife ?'

" ' Well, let me see what I can do with them.'

" So old Jonas then put his hand around the top of several weeds, and stuck his fingers a little way into the ground under them, and pulled the weeds up. They had long roots, and I was surprised to see that he should pull them up instead of cutting them off. Then said the old man :

" ' If you want to destroy all the weeds among your flowers, you must pull them all up by the roots, and never think of cutting them off even with the ground. Just as long as the root stays in the ground a new top will come to it, and so the weed won't be killed at all, but will grow every time it gets a new shower.'

" Now, all this was new to me, for I had never thought that there could be a better way of getting free of weeds than to cut them off. After that I tried old Jonas's remedy for getting rid of the weeds in my garden, and I never found that one troubled me again after I had pulled it up by the roots."

While Augusta's mother was relating this circumstance, she saw that her daughter was affected by it. And, indeed, she saw the tears beginning to flow down Augusta's cheeks. She pressed her to her heart, and said to her :

" Now, my dear child, you have been trying to get clear of your vanity by cutting the weeds off at the top of the ground. The only way to get clear of it, and of all the weeds that grow in your heart, is to go to your Heavenly Father, and ask him for a new heart. He will destroy the weeds, and the flowers which he plants there will have nothing to disturb their growth, but will become more beautiful and fragrant all the time."

Now, if little Augusta had been like some children, this story would have produced only a slight impression upon her. But she loved her mother, and she showed her love by following her advice ; and it could ever after be said of her vanity, as well as of several other bad qualities that had begun to manifest themselves, that they had been pulled up by the roots.

AN EFFECTIVE STORY.

We trust our little folks already hate intoxicating liquors. We hope this story will make them hate it the more.

" Five years ago I had a brother, a bright, beautiful lad, in whom the hopes of a large family circle centered. He was called a genius, and he was one. Sensitive, gentle-hearted, and generous to a fault, he also gave promise of extraordinary vigor of mind. One night, several boys in the village where I was born resolved to have a frolic. The party was to be a secret one, and we were each to carry from our homes, if we could, provisions and wine. It came off with success. There was good cheer. There were bright and flowing liquors ; we were all young and buoyant. My brother had never tasted wine. Whether it was a disinclination caused by natural dislike, or whether his intuitions led him to avoid it as dangerous to him, I do not know. I only know—and the recollection is at this moment burning in my brain—that we all thought if we could get Herbert drunk it would be fine fun. Fiends could not have set themselves more ingeniously at work to compass this object than we did. I was foremost in the attempt. I will not excuse myself, nor in aught palliate my conduct. I knew he had a manuscript at home, that had been pronounced remarkable by competent critics ; I knew he could improvise almost without mental efforts, and expected that under the stimulus of the fiery serpent—whose sting I dread more than I dread death, his brain would be quickened, and we should be charmed, perhaps amazed, at the exhibition of his rare gift.

At last we prevailed, but instead of quickening, the wine stupefied his faculties. A few glasses reduced him to a state of utter inebriety.

The party broke up. We were all wild with drink and excitement ; he alone was immovable and quite insensible. There was no rousing him from the state of deathly sleep in which he had fallen. I dared not take him home that night, fearing that our frolic might be found out in consequence of the trouble we should have in getting him to his room. So we left him there, lying as comfortably as we could place him—his handsome face flushed and almost purple, his active brain, for once, completely stupefied.

In the morning I was awakened by the sound of sobs. A white, scared face stood over me ; a trembling, weak voice cried out :

" O Philip, your poor brother."

I sprang from my bed. My friends, I knew the truth soon enough. Herbert had recovered consciousness in the night sufficient to mislead him. He had fallen from the window, a height of twenty feet. He was still living. In vain my prayers and tears, and anguish. His voice faltered.

Young men, he is living yet, but an incurable idiot. Now will you ask me to take the accursed stuff? Yes, the curse of the living God rests upon it. It has burdened my life—it has ruined as noble an intellect as ever was ready to do battle with the faults and follies of the world. Do you still jeer and laugh, because I will not be jovial ? I tell you if it was a living thing I would strangle it—and there is nothing upon earth I hate with such a deadly hatred.

ANGRY TEMPERS.

Mr. Guthrie tells us of two brothers who had fallen out, and in the heat and whirlwind of his passion the elder struck the younger on the cheek. Brave as steel and quick as lightning, the other raised his hand to return the blow ; but ere it fell, he remembered how he had read that morning, by his mother's knee, these words : " Whoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also." No sophist, but a simple child, who took Christ's words in their plain and ordinary sense, he dropped his arm, and turning on his brother's eyes where tears of forgiveness had quenched the flash of anger, he offered the other cheek for a second blow. It was the other's turn to weep now. Surprised, subdued, melted, he fell on his brother's neck, and kissing him, acknowledged his offence, and implored forgiveness. H. G. Adams, in Kind Words, sings thus to " Angry Willy :"

What, red in the face, little Willy ?
What, double your fists? O fie!
To get in a passion, how silly!
To stamp, and to rave, and to cry,
To snatch at a stick, or a switch, too,
Your poor little brother to strike,
Because you can't do as you wished to,
Because you can't go where you like.

Now, peep in the glass, little Willy—
Why, did you e'er see such a fright?
You look just like one that's struck silly,
And can't tell the wrong from the right ;
Your eyes starting out of their sockets,
Your hair all rough as a mop,
Your teeth clenched, your cheeks red as rockets,
What a face! O, my Willy, do stop!

Just think of the sin, dearest Willy,
Of letting our passions have sway ;
Too mildly I said it was silly—
'Tis dreadfully wicked. O pray
That God will forgive you, and make you
A better boy, gentle and mild,
Before all good angels forsake you,
And your young soul with crime is defiled.

THE Proprietor of PICKSTONE'S WASHING AND CLEANSING CRYSTAL, deems it his duty to caution the public against spurious imitations of his highly celebrated Washing Crystal, which is the most harmless compound extant. It is free from Lime, Vitriol, and all other deadly mixtures so common to be found amongst washing compounds. Try Pickstone's Washing Crystal, if you want ease, comfort, and economy in washing, which washes every thing, and has rapid sale.

It will be found invaluable for the following domestic purposes, viz. :—It washes all fine things, such as Muslin Lace, Crotchet Work, Baby Linen, &c., cleaning Sponges, Combs, and Brushes ; removing stains from the hands, and grease from Carpets, Cloth, Flannel, &c. It makes Hard Water Soft, and may be used with good effect in Baths, as it immediately removes all condensed perspiration from the skin. A small quantity should also be used in the foot pan. It forms a cooling and cleansing wash for the head, by dissolving a teaspnonful of the Crystal in a quarter of a pint of water ; and for cleansing the Mouth, Teeth, and Gums, it is quite a luxury, by adding a teaspoonful to a tumbler of water. It renders linen beautifully white, and unlike other preparations, at the same time preserves the fabric. It contains nothing injurious to life. A child eating it by mistake, will not be injured.

If you have not used this Cleansing Crystal, lose no time in obtaining it. Nothing has ever been introduced into this country which has effected such a wonderful change upon Washing Days. It saves your time—saves your clothes—saves your money ; and it does not injure the most delicate hands. Pickstone's Cleansing Crystal makes washing a pleasure, reduces the cost of fuel, the wear and tear of labor, and improves every article washed. For Linens, and heavy washes, it cannot be surpassed ; for Laces, and fine fabrics, it is unequalled. It does not injure the color of Prints, but strengthens and improve them—by its use they retain their original brilliancy. Flannels become white and soft like new. White things are much improved, and keep their color, even if put by for months. Thousands of Families made happy! No misery on a Washing Day, with PICKSTONE'S Cleansing Crystal.

Sold by most respectable Grocers and Chemists, in Packets THREE CENTS EACH, sufficient for 20 Gallons of water, or Twelve for Thirty Cents, also in Boxes containing 144 Packets, price Three Dollars each. Refuse to ask for PICKSTONE'S Washing Crystal, as there are spurious imitations. Do not condemn it untried. Make one trial! PROTECTED BY ACT OF PARLIAMENT.
