HARSH JUDGMENTS.

O God ! whose thoughts are brightest light, Whose love runs always clear, 'To whose kind wisdom sinning souls, Amidst their sins, are dear-

Sweeten my bitter-thoughted heart " With charity like thine, Till self shall be the only spot On earth that does not shine.

Hard-heartedness dwells not with souls Round whom thine arms are drawn ; And dark thoughts fade away in grace, Like cloud-spots in the dawn.

Time was when I believed that wrong In others to detect Was part of genius, and a gift To cherish, not reject.

Now, better taught by thee, O Lord ! This truth dawns on my mind-The best effect of heavenly light Is earth's false eyes to blind.

He whom no praise can reach is aye Men's least attempts approving : Whom justice makes all-merciful, Omniscience makes all-loving.

When we ourselves least kindly are, We deem the world unkind : Dark hearts, in flowers where honey lies, Only the poision find.

How Thou canst think so well of us, Yet be the God thou art, Is darkness to my intellect, But sunshine to my heart.

Yet habits linger in the soul : More grace, O Lord! more grace; More sweetness from thy loving heart, More sunshine from thy face. FABER.

"What has become of the lecture, Lizzie ?" She turned round with an odd little smile. "I was what Mrs. Whitney terms 'crowded out,' " she replied.

His face changed, and he came over to where she was standing, and said in an undertone :

"It is good to follow the Master's example, for even Christ 'pleased not himself.' "

She looked up at him a moment with upsteady lip, and then said quietly :

" It is good."

When Mattie was gone, however, and supper was over, she went away to her room, and for a few minotes had what the children call "a good cry." Only because she was disappointed about the lecture, not because she was sorry for what she had done. On the contrary she was very glad, and after her cry was over, she felt better.

The law-books were all put aside to-night, and her brother devoted the evening to her entertainment. It was very pleasant, and when her father roused himself and joined their chat and afterwards read to them from a new book which he brought home, Lizzie thought it was a long time since she had spent so agreeable an evening.

"By the way," he said, as he closed his book, "Wendell Phillips has consented to give us to-morrow night also, I understand, and I believe I can get away early. Would you like to go, Lizzie ?"

"Yes, papa, very much !" she replied; and then meeting her brother's look her eyes fell.

"Did you know of this, Will ?" she asked. Mattie came in, tired and sleepy, but full of her enjoyment of the evening, and when she had related to her amused audience all she could remember, she suddenly threw her arms about her sister.

"Oh ! Lizzie," she said, " it was so good of you to let me go, when you wanted to be away yourself. I thought of dear mother. You are so like her sometimes."
