Poetry.

"They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever."—Dan. xii. 3.

Wearied and worn with earthly cares, I yielded to repose,
And soon before my raptured sight a glorious vision rose;
I thought, while slumbering on my couch in midnight's solemn gloom,
I heard an angel's silvery voice, and radiance filled my room,
A gentle touch awakened me, a gentle whisper said:
"Arise, O sleeper! follow me," and through the air we fled;
We left the earth so far away that like a speck it seemed,
And heavenly glory, calm and pure, across our pathway streamed.

Still on we went; my soul was wrapt in silent ecstacy;
I wondered what the end would be, what next should meet mine eye,
I know not how we journeyed through the pathless fields of light,
When suddenly a change was wrought, and I was clothed in white;
We stood before a city's walls, most glorious to behold;
We passed through streets of glistening pearl; o'er streets of purest gold.
It needed not the sun by day, nor silver moon by night;
The glory of the Lord was there, the Lamb himself its light.

Bright angels paced the shining streets, sweet music filled the air,
And white-robed saints, with glittering crowns, from every clime were there;
And some that I had loved on earth stood with them round the throne:
"All worthy is the Lamb," they sang, "the glory his alone!"
But fairer far than all beside, I saw my Saviour's face,
And as I gazed he smiled on me with wondrous love and grace.
Lowly I bowed before his throne, o'erjoyed that I at last
Had gained the objects of my hopes—that earth at length was past.

And then in solemn tones he said, "Where is the diadem
That ought to sparkle on thy brow, adorned with many a gem?
I know thou hast believed on me, and life, through me, is thine,
But where are all those radiant stars that in thy crown should shine?
Yonder thou seest a glorious throng and stars on every brow;
For every soul they led to me they wear a jewel now;
And such thy bright reward had been, if such had been thy deed—
If thou hadst sought some wandering feet in paths of peace to lead.

"I did not mean that thou shouldst tread the way of life alone;
But that the clear and shining light which round thy footsteps shone
Should guide some other weary feet to my bright home of rest,
And thus in blessing those around thou hadst thyself been blest.

* * * * * *

The vision faded from my sight, the voice no longer spake,
A spell seemed brooding o'er my soul, which long I feared to break;
And when at last I gazed around, in morning's glimmering light,
My spirit fell o'erwhelmed beneath that vision's awful might.

I rose and wept with chastened joy that yet I dwelt below;
That yet another hour was mine, my faith by works to show;
That yet some sinner I might tell of Jesus' dying love
And help to lead some weary soul to seek a home above.
And now, while on the earth I stay, my motto this shall be:
"To live no longer for myself, but Him who died for me!"
And graven on my inmost soul, this word of truth divine,
"They that turn many unto the Lord, bright as the stars shall shine."

Miscellaneous.

HOW A TYRANT LOST ONE SLAVE.

"Ma, do give me a dollar, please. I can't go home without it."

"Why not, Oliver?"

"Because I promised to pay Tom White what I owe him, and Hiram Blake, too."

"How much do you owe, my son?"

"Half a dollar to Ben, and eighteen-pence to Tom, and—O—a good deal more."

"What have you to pay with?"

"Just sixpence, and that is all."

Aunt Abby sat in her easy chair, and her knitting-needles clicked very fast, during this talk between her neice and Oliver; then she laid the stocking in her lap, took off her spectacles, and looked at him as if her sharp eyes were searching through his pockets for that smooth old silver sixpence.

Oliver had been lying on the floor, twisting a chair with his foot; but he started when Aunt Abby said:

"Ten years old, and a bankrupt!"

To be sure, he didn't know what bankrupt meant (do you?); but he went out, looking as if he felt small enough to go out through the keyhole. Then Aunt Abby and her neice had one of those wise talks that mothers and aunties sometimes have when mothers and boys are blessed with such a dear, precious, silver-haired auntie as Aunt Abby. The result was, that instead of Oliver's going home to Boston with his mother, he was to spend two more weeks in the country; and Aunt Abby made this promise: "I will teach Oliver to keep out of debt."

The next day the old stage rattled up to the door, and mother and two little sisters were snug in the back seat, and Oliver kissed them good-by; but, before the sound of the wheels died away, Oliver had gone over the stone-wall, and was turning somersets in the broad fields of new-mown hay.

The great horn had sounded at noon, and Oliver had eaten dinner with the hay makers, when Aunt Abby called him into the sitting-room with her, and told him to sit down at the old-fashioned writing-desk. Before him was a clean sheet of paper, an inkstand, and a quill pen.

"Now, my boy," said she, "I want you to write down what you owe—don't leave out one cent."

He was just learning to write, and he sat awhile dreading it, and trying to think. How still it was! —not a sound but the tall, black clock in the corner, ticking so loud it seemed to say, "Write—write."

Just as he finished and had added it all up, Aunt Abby came back and looked at the following accounts:

Borrowed of Ben Fisher 20c., 10c., 20c.	$ .50
" " Tom White	.18¾
" " Enoch Messenger, for slate pencil	.6¼
" " Hiram Blake, for cream cakes	.10
" " Tim Fales's knife, and lost it	.60
" " Benny Allen's ball, and lost it	.20
	$1.65

"Now, Oliver," said she, "do you want to pay all this?"

"Yes, ma'am, just as quick as I get home."

"You shall do it; but I am going to have you earn the money."

Then she took the paper and pinned it up on the dark door-post at the side of the kitchen door, just where everybody came in—for it was at the end of the house, under the broad elm-tree, whose shadows danced in the sunlight all over the great dooryard. Then she brought a square basket to Oliver, and said:

"You may as well begin now: go and pick this full of currants."

Behind the house, up on the hill, then a little way across its green top and on the sloping side, was the garden, and Oliver well knew the way to the long rows of currant-bushes. It was slow work, filling the basket—for many red, luscious bunches found their way down somebody's throat. At last it was full, and he helped Aunt Abby pick them off the stems into a glass dish, watching how they rolled like shining beads slipping off a string. After that Aunt Abby, measured them in a bright tin-cup, and then went to the door-post and wrote down something with a red chalk she carried in her pocket. The next day she wanted plenty of whortleberries; she sent over to grandfather's for all the cousins to go with Oliver to the pasture near the cave. How merrily they went, over stone-walls, climbing rail-fences when they couldn't let down the bars, across fields, and through the woods, until they reached the cave. Here Cousin Nat told the the younger ones of the old Indian who used to live there, and was found at last dead, sitting up against the rock. They whispered softly for awhile, as if they feared the Indian might come back to his old home; but they soon found plenty of berries, and they were busy enough.

At noon they spread out on a flat rock the nice lunch Aunt Abby had put up, and made drinking-cups of broad green leaves, dipping up sparkling water from the brook.

They picked berries again until everything was full that could hold berries, and then the stained lips talked nearly all the way home.

The next day, one of the eventful ones of the week, was baking day. Oliver was sent to pick up brush to heat the oven, and then to gather chips from the wood-yard. That wonderful wood shed, with one side open to the road; how every passer-by admired that wood-pile, that never grew less; the round even sticks, each showing where the saw revealed the tell-tale circles, and put in so evenly that the whole looked like a vast wall of mosaic work. Oliver gathered his wood, and then, in the great kitchen, stood looking in wonder at the table full of pies, bread, Indian pudding, and loaves of sweet, brown bread; while the flames crackled, and the oven roared as if impatient for its treasures. Another day his work was to gather pears from the crooked old pear tree, that was planted in the garden long ago, when Aunt Abby was a little girl, and her father had just come back from the war.

At last Sunday came.

"Well," thought Oliver, "here's one day that I won't have to work and earn anything."

He had been to church, and at noon had taken a walk in churchyard, and spelled out the names on the old, moss-grown grave-stones, and been back to church again, and then come home in the middle of the long summer afternoon. Aunt Abby called him into the best parlor, and while she turned over the leaves of a great book, he was looking around. There was the fire-place, filled with bunches of asparagus, and vases of fresh flowers on the high mantel-piece. He was busy wondering if anything alive ever did look like the picture of his mother's grandmother, with a high-crowned, wide-bordered cap, and a broad black ribbon round the head, when Aunt Abby showed him three verses, in different places, that he was to learn and repeat to her. It was hard for him in such square-looking letters, with every s so tall it looked like an l, to spell the words out. It was very still —except the buzz of one or two flies, and the rustle of Aunt Abby's black silk dress, now and then.

The air was sweet with the breath of roses coming in at the window, spiced a little with the vanilla bean in the silver snuff-box in Aunt Abby's lap. She sat and dozed, and sometimes woke and took a pinch of snuff, until he was ready to repeat his verses. They were these:

"The borrower is servant to the lender."

"Owe no man anything."

"The wicked borroweth, and payeth not again."

Then she showed him the picture in the Bible of the man who seized his fellow servant by the throat and said:

"Pay me that thou owest."

And her talk and the picture made such an impression that he dreamed that night that Tom White and Tim Fales had tied his hands, and were taking him to the debtors' prison.

A few days more, and Aunt Abby set him down again to copy her chalk list by the side of his list of debts. This is the way it stood:

Picking Currants	$ .15
" Whortleberries, 4 qts.	.40
" Pears	.10
Gathering oven wood	.10
Feeding chickens every day	.50
Scripture	.25
Going to the well	.20
Going for cows	.50
	$2.19

Then she opened a certain place in the writing desk, touched a spring, and a little door flew open. There was a secret drawer, from which she drew out a long purse, and took out a bright gold piece and handed it to Oliver. It was two dollars and a half; more money than he ever had at one time, and the first he ever earned.

"Now," she said, "this is to pay all your debts; and you must get a receipt for each one. If you will show me the receipts when I come to Boston, and you have not gone in debt for anything more, I will give you something handsome."

It was six months before Aunt Abby went to Boston, as she did once a year, to get her pension money, for her father had been an old Revolutionary soldier.

Oliver's mother helped her to do her yearly shopping, and to buy piles of yarn and bright-colored worsteds, for nobody could ever keep count of the stockings, and mittens, and scarfs, and shawls she knit.

She was nearly ready to go home again, when she told Oliver to bring her the receipts he got for all his debts. It would have made a lawyer laugh to see the queerly written bits of paper, all signed by different boys; but she spelled them all out. And after he told her he had not borrowed a cent since, she presented him with a handsome writing-desk. In it was a gold pencil, and a blank-book bound in red morocco, with a pocket in one end for papers. She gathered up the receipts and pinned them together, and wrote on the back, in her own round handwriting, Oliver's name, the date, and in large letters this word, Free.

"This account-book," she said, "is to keep an account of every cent you receive, and all you spend, but do not disgrace it by going in debt. Keep exact accounts, never be in debt, and you will be rich."

Oliver is now one of the merchant princes of the land, who gives away thousands every year, but he keeps an account of all his income and his expenses, as exactly as he did of the berries he picked, in that visit, in his boyhood. He sometimes gets out the yellow slips of paper, and tells his boys how he got out of debt, and that Aunt Abby laid the foundation of his fortune.

He says the only debt he never paid, is the life of success he owes to her teaching him how to get out and to keep out of the grip of that old tyrant, who has destroyed thousands. Beware of him, boys; he comes in little habits, in little ways, but his little links get to be strong chains, that make people slaves, and his name is Debt.—Little Corporal.

CAUTION! CAUTION! CAUTION!

THE Proprietor of PICKSTONE'S WASHING AND CLEANSING CRYSTAL, deems it his duty to caution the public against spurious imitations of his highly celebrated Washing Crystal, which is the most harmless compound extant. It is free from Lime, Vitriol, and all other deadly mixtures so common to be found amongst washing compounds. Try Pickstone's Washing Crystal, if you want ease, comfort, and economy in washing, which washes every thing, and has rapid sale.

It will be found invaluable for the following domestic purposes, viz:—It washes all fine things, such as Muslin Lace, Crotchet Work, Baby Linen, &c.; cleaning Sponges, Combs, and Brushes; removing stains from the hands, and grease from Carpets, Cloth, Flannel, &c. It makes Hard Water Soft, and may be used with good effect in Baths, as it immediately removes all condensed perspiration from the skin. A small quantity should also be used in the foot pan. It forms a cooling and cleansing wash for the head, by dissolving a teaspoonful of the Crystal in a quarter of a pint of water; and for cleansing the Mouth, Teeth, and Gums, it is quite a luxury, by adding a teaspoonful to a tumbler of water. It renders linen beautifully white, and unlike other preparations, at the same time preserves the fabric. It contains nothing injurious to life. A child eating it by mistake, will not be injured.

If you have not used this Cleansing Crystal, lose no time in obtaining it. Nothing has ever been introduced into this country which has effected such a wonderful change upon Washing Days. It saves your time—saves your clothes—saves your money; and it does not injure the most delicate hands. Pickstone's Cleansing Crystal makes washing a pleasure, reduces the cost of fuel, the wear and tear of labor, and improves every article washed. For Linens, and heavy washes, it cannot be surpassed; for Laces, and fine fabrics, it is unequalled. It does not injure the color of Prints, but strengthens and improve them—by its use they retain their original brilliancy. Flannels become white and soft like new. White things are much improved, and keep their color, even if put by for months. Thousands of Families made happy! No misery on a Washing Day, with PICKSTONE'S Cleansing Crystal.

Sold by most respectable Grocers and Chemists, in Packets THREE CENTS EACH, sufficient for 20 Gallons of water, or Twelve for Thirty Cents, also in Boxes containing 144 Packets, price Three Dollars each. ☞ Be sure to ask for PICKSTONE'S Washing Crystal, as there are spurious imitations. Do not condemn it untried. Make one trial! PROTECTED BY ACT OF PARLIAMENT.

Sole Agent for New Brunswick.

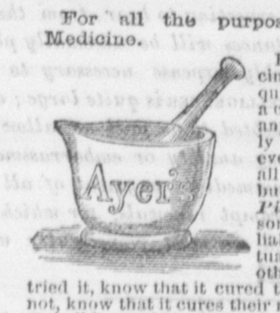
Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.



Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them: those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always —that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhoea, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.
