BITTER-SWEET.

BY REV. SAMUEL W. DUFFIELD. Larkman, the Wise, received a bitter gourd-Harsh-rioded, acrid, evil to the taste-Bestowed upon him by his generous lord, While melons sweet and juicy went to waste.

Men looked to see what the wise man would do, Getting, instead of fruit, a thing most vile ; But he, regarding old griefs more than new, Stretched forth his hand and took it with a smile. you have done to day, and left poor Edith when she

Then grew the wonder, as, in sight of all, He broke the rind and ate with face serene, Leaving no portion, whether great or small, To bear them witness what the gift had been.

And then he said, as on their lips he saw Amazement putting on a garb of speech, "Hearken, O friends, and gain the royal law, That he who will not learn can never teach.

" And shall not I, so long sustained and fed From that kind hand which lifts me by degrees, Receive whatever, for my daily bread, His bounty furnishes, and be at peace ?"

For thus appears a wisdom truly wise ! A service free from self; and if we take That which at first we view with doubtful eyes, It is transformed when eaten for His sake.

O Lord, my God, how often, in my pride, I crave the sweet and let the bitter go ! Forgetful that no gifts are misapplied, And that I know not as Pought to know. -Our Monthly for March.

THE COMING SPRING. BY MRS. HEMANS

I COME ! I Come ! ye have call'd me long, I come o'er the mountains with light and song : You may trace my step o'er the wakening earth By the winds which tell of the violet's birth, By the primrose-stars in the shadow grass, By the green leaves opening as I pass.

I have breathed on the South, and the chestnut flowers

By thousands have burst from the forest bowers : And the ancient graves, and the fallen fanes Are veil'd with wreathes on Italian plains :---But it is not for me, in my hour of bloom, To speak of the ruin or the tomb.

* Mamma, E lie is so bad, and it frightered me so that I dare not stay with her.'

'Oh. Susie! have you left your sister to suffer alone ?'

That was all her mother said then, for sle ran upstairs to Edith, who was crying because she felt lonely as well as ill.

When she was better and could be left, the mother talked to Susan about her conduct.

"Susan, you are a very selfish girl indeed." 'Oh, mamma ! how can you call me selfish ?' asked Susan, quite astonished. 'None but a very selfish child would have acted as was suffering so. I cannot think how you could be so unkind.'

'It was kindness, not unkindness, mamma. could not bear to see her in so much pain."

* You love yourself better than you love your sister. You might have made the pain a little better if you had stayed, or at least it would not have been so hard to bear. But just because it was painful to your own feelings you ran away. Don't you see, Susie, that you cared more for how you felt than how Edie felt ?'

Susan began to look very sorrowful.

'I am afraid I have behaved very unkindly, mamma; I see that I am selfish after all, but I will try to think less of myself in future.' And Susie kept her word.

THE TERRIBLE CHAIN.

It has been related by a French writer that the captain of a vessel was one day walking carelessly along by the side of a river not far from its mouth, at low water. As he looked about him, not minding his steps, he did not perceive extended before him a great chain, one end of which was fastened to a ring fixed in a stone on the bank, the other to an anchor sunk in the river. Not seeing it, he stumbled against it, and his foot passing through one of the links of the chain, he could not draw it back again. He struggled violently to extricate himself; he turned his foot first on one side, then on the other, but all in vain ! He then called out for help, and some men who were passing heard him and hastened to his assistance.

They strained every nerve to drag the foot through the chain, but it was beginning to swell, and all their efforts were in vain. What was to be done? To unfasten or take away the chain was impossible. It was a mass of iron which could only be moved with the help of a capstan, and there was no time to be lost; for the tide was coming in, and the water rose

John Torrance, Esq., T. M. Bryson, Esq., Stephen Selden,

Susie went, though very unwillingly; she would into the room.

Very soon Edith's face grew white and pinched.

bear.'

Susie grew frightened then.

makes me feel so unhappy to watch you.'

It was very bad already. Great drops of perspiration stood upon the poor white little face, and Edith clasped her hands together, and groaned, while tears came into her eyes.

"Ob, dear, what shall I do!' It was not Edith, but Susan who said that.

"Will you give me some of the medicine, and bathe my face ?' said Edith, faintly. She was feeling so ill that she could scarcely speak at all.

Susan did as she was asked about the medicine, but instead of bathing her sister's face she went out of the room, and ran away down-stairs, where she could not see her suffer, or hear her cry.

Was not this selfishness ? I think it was. It was very bad, of course, for Susan to stand by and see her sister in such pain; it grieved her very much, and made her feel as if she could scarcely bear it ; but how unkind it was of her to go down and leave poor Edie quite alone rather than stay to feel uncomfortable at sight of her sufferings !

When their mother came back Susan told her.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER. ..... Go-speak to Jesus first;

Published by the Religious Tract Society.

But perhaps you doubt whether you have any earnest desire to be saved on the only terms possible, namely, by entire submission to Christ. You will say that the story of the man caught in the link of know yours; he felt his extremity, and you do not feel yours. This is the very doubt I wish to meet

Then to the child. Go, let Him speak to thee Who taught on earth in Judah's waning days On mountain slopes, along the pebbly beach, And on the joyous billows of the sea. Yes, in the closet hear His voice who spake As never man did speak. Ask for His mind Whose patience bore the burdens of a world. Ask trustingly; the promise is to thee: Thou shalt receive. Then meet the child as one For whom the Saviour died. That ransomed soul-God knows-it may be given thee, to fift The little fledgling to an angel's seat. Oh! touch not heedlessly the chords that thrill To gladness or to woe. Lay gentle hands On things that tell the tale in other worlds. Go-speak to Jesus-wait His answering word : Then tell the trusting child like one who comes
