Its gates of pearl are even now unfolding Where angels stand; The eye of faith is dazzled in beholding That blessed land.

Its walls of jasper and its trees of healing Shade waters clear, While songs of praise, in joyous echoes stealing, Entrance the ear.

They have no need of sun or moonbeam shining No night is there; They who for heavenly gales were vainly pining, Palm branches bear.

From golden censers, incense sweet ascending Is borne on wings, While round about the throne, the rainbow bending,

New promise brings.

But ere we reach the blessed land immortal, Our feet must stray Through devious paths, and death's dark, chilling A fearful way.

Our bark must toss upon the raging billows, The storm-winds high; Our steps must linger 'neath the shade of willows, Where treasures lie.

O'er mountain tops, with fainting hearts, and

We yet must climb; Then in the valleys, desolate and dreary, Abide our time.

We know not where or how the way is turning, Through forests drear, Or on the desert plains, where sands are burning, Barren and sere.

It may be soon the veil will be uplifted Which spans our way ;-The darkest cloud may usher in, when rifted, The blaze of day.

Or we may linger till the night-dews falling, Our spirits chill; Weary, perplexed, and on our Father calling

For guidance still. "We see the end," in all its radiant beauty, "But not the path;" We may be led to brave, in call of duty, The lightning's scath;

Tried in the furnace whose hot fires are glowing While foes assail; Or drinking cups with bitterness o'erflowing

Till spirits quail. Yet far beyond this maze of endless winding, Where now we roam, In blaze of glory that is well-nigh binding,

And, casting down our crowns in adoration Before our God, We shall forget the "path" of tribulation Our feet have trod.

We see our home.

Miscellaneous.

OLD DICK AND YOUNG DICK.

Dick Bridges is a fisherman, and a bad fellow he is. He lives at the Point, where there are half a dozen other fishermen's houses pretty much by themselves. Dick had a boy Dick, who, as was quite natural, followed in the steps of his father. He swore as his father swore, and was ugly to his sister as his father was to his mother. He was lazy too as the father was lazy, when he was not fishing. Dick's father often sent him to work on the small patch of land behind the house, But Dick did not work long; as soon as his father's back was turned, he was off. Old Dick often swore he should make something out of that lad, or he would cowhide him; but he did not.

Mr. Bush, who lived next door, got all his vegetables from his garden, while the Bridges had to go little: but she was a feeble woman, and had as you only had religion."

There was not a word in the English language that Dick hated like the word religion He would always curse it in a frightful manner. I do not know what he thought it was poor fellow. It never did him any harm, and I am pretty sure it never did | ger about the streets, and a shirk at your business. him any good either. Well, old Dick went to the Grand Banks in the spring with the fishing fleet. He went off crosser than usual. "Everything is agin me," he said and "there's that Dick" but Dick hid, and didn't

A day or two after he sailed, a man came from the town down to the Point to hold a meeting. He held it in a large shed. He went round and asked all the folks to come, the mothers, and grandsires, and boys and girls, who were very much pleased to be asked; and as some of the husbands and fathers had just gone to sea, there were feeling hearts that stood in need of God's blessing. The gentleman met Dick among the very first, and he invited him to come to the meeting.

"Yes, sir," said Dick, "I will come and bring mother;" and he went so far as to help the gentleman to fix up his seats. Some of the other boys thought they should not go. "Well, I'm in for it; for just as sure as you let them live and grow in I shall go," said Dick.

The meeting came off. They had beautiful singing, and the gentleman prayed, and he asked the people to say the words after him, and they didsome of them did. And he read about the Lord Jesus, how he came down from heaven to do them goed, to be their Savionr and their Friend, and to anger, strife, and all kinds of black sin. how he was there in the shed, to help to wash a way their sins and make them good and happy. | yourself to do an evil action. If you know an act Oh, how glad poor Mrs. Bridges was to hear the to be wrong never consent to it. Keep yourself good words; and Dick, why, Dick's eyes and ears pure. Dare to do right, though it be sometimes were wide open. He heard and understood every hard. Remember, "Thou God, seest me." woed.

Mother," said Dick, as they went home, "is this meeting religion? Them were handsome songs." "Religious folks are meetingers," answered his mother; "but religion is this and something more." "What ?" asked the boy.

"Well," said his mother, "it is being good, Dick."

"Not swearing and drinking and being cross and getting mad," said Dick, "which make folks miserable, any how."

"Yes," said his mother, "it is all that, and somet hing more."

What ?" asked Dick again, with lively interest. "Why, it is something that makes it all shining nside," said his mother. "I believe it is love Dick; it is God's love. Anyhow, you love everybody, and want to speak kind and help them, and you are dreadful sorry you've been bad, and you think you never will do so again, never."

"Well," said Dick, after a minute or two, " it seems just as if I felt so. I thought in the meeting when that gentleman was speaking, I hate bad; I hate it, I do. I do. I want to be good awfully, and I said easy, 'Lord Jesus, will you wash my Dick Bridges,' bad sins all away, and give me a real good, clean, new heart ?"

"And he will, Dickey," said the poor mother, squeezing his hand; for, somehow or other, Dickey's hard, dirty hand had found its way into his mother's hand, and they went into the house

"Is that so?" asked the boy.

"Let us try it," said his mother; "let us do just as the gentleman told us;" and they both fell on their knees in the little kitchen, and prayed for the new heart and the right spirit which the gentleman told them of.

Well, not to talk too long, I will say in one word that Dick was "born again" that night. " Born again! How queer!" Yes, it was just so queer to Nicodemus when he came in the night to talk with Jesus in Jerusalem. "You must be born again," Jesus said to him. Just as Dick was born into his father's family, so he was now born into the Lord Jesus Christ's family, and he waked up the next morning loving God, just as he used to wake up loving his mother. There is nothing strange about that, is there? And his evil ways looked ugly, and he was resolved to kick them off; and good ways he wanted, oh, ever so much.

From that good hour Dick took a new start in life. He started a Christian boy. The gentleman came again and again, and they had a Sunday school and singing. I cannot stop to tell all the good and pleasant things which came, with God's blessing, on the Point. In the fall, the fishing-smacks returned from the banks, and Dick's father among the rest. He did not know anything that had happened at home, but about the first thing he saw was,-what do you think? The little patch of land behind the house full of "garden sass," as he called it. There were beets and beans, and corn and cabbages, and a cucumber-vine looking as smart as you please.

Old Dick swore what he meant to be a pleasant, good-tempered oath; but his wife said, "Don't tisement, it has to be seen to be appreciated. It is estimated price. Great Reduction In the prices of Hats! Imported father, please don't. This is Dick's work. He did it to surprise you."

"The young raskill," cried old Dick, grinning; what possessed him? I never saw the like of "It was religion, father," said his wife. "Dick has got religion, and you never saw a better boy. This, father, is what religion does," said the good woman, bravely.

"Religion!" exclaimed the old man, "religion, Mary! Then I've been mistaken all the days of my life. If religion can make things over like that, give me religion."

The garden patch was the first real sermon the old man ever attended to; and as it preached all through the fall. "By their fruits shall ye know them," he began to see more and more what good fruit the gospel bore in his little family. "As for Jan. 28 the Point," he said,—old Dick looked the rest. Ah, the gospel had done a great deal for it, that Patna Kips. was plain enough.—Child's Paper.

A GOLDEN TEXT FOR BOYS.

A man of very pleasing address, but very dishonest in his practices, once said to an honorable merchant, "whose word was as good as his bond," "I would give fifty thousand dollars for your

"Why so?" asked the other, in some surprise. "Because I could make a hundred thousand dol-

The honorable character which was at the bottom of that good name he cared nothing for; it was only the reputation which he could turn to account in a money point of view which he coveted, But a good name could not be bought with silver; it, over all other possessions, must be fairly earned. When it is possessed, it is a better business capital than a great sum of money.

It is a capital any boy or girl may secure. Honesty must be its foundation even to the smallest particulars. When an employer says, That is a boy I can trust," he will always find himself in demand provided he joins with it induswithout. Mrs. Bridges sometimes tried to hoe a try. "The hand of the diligent maketh rich." It seems hard at the time, maybe, this ceaseless daily much as she could do in the house. She was a round of work, while other boys are lounging good woman; and who can count her heart-aches about store steps, or playing ball on the green. But over the wild and wicked conduct of her husband | the reward will come, if you are faithful. While the loungers are drrgging out a miserable lifetime "O father," she used to say to old Dick, -" if | in privation and poverty, the hard-working boy lives at his ease, respected and honored.

Remember this, boys, if you desire to make your way in the world. There is nothing that can serve your purpose for a name for honesty and industry, and you will never acquire either if you are a loun-Everybody suspects a lad who is often seen about saloon doors or tavern steps. It undermines a boy's character for honesty very rapidly, to mix with the society he finds there, and such habits tend to anything but industrious ways.

"A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than silver and gold." Print that text on your heart, and carry it with you in all your walks and ways. If you are led to secure it, it will be worth far more than fifty thousand dollars" to you.

THREE THINGS TO AVOID. 1. Avoid bad thoughts. We can not help bad thoughts coming into our hearts sometimes, but we can help keeping them there. As somebody has said, "We can not prevent the crows from flying over our heads, but we can prevent them from building nests in our hair." Fight bad thoughts, your hearts, they will breed mischief and misery. 2. Avoid bad words. Bad thoughts are parents to bad words, and the children are even more mischievous than their parents. For bad thoughts, so long as they are confined to your own hearts, only hurt you, but bad words hurt others. They lead 3. You must avoid bad deeds. Do not allow
