SCATTER SEEDS OF KINDNESS.

MRS. ELLEN H. GATES, author of "Your Mission," which was set to music several years ago by Philip Phillips, and became so widely popular, has written another song, entitled "Scatter Seeds of Kindness," which bids fair to attain as great popularity as its predecessor. The following are the words; the music, we believe, has not been published :

Let us gather up the sunbeams, Lying all around our path; Let us keep the wheat and roses, Casting out the thorns and chaff ; Let us find our sweetest comfort In the blessings of to-day, With a patient hand removing All the briers from the way. CHORUS-Then scatter seeds of kindness, Then scatter seeds of kindness,

Then scatter seeks of kindness, For our reaping by-and-by.

Strange, we never prize the music Till the sweet-voiced bird has flown? Strange that we should slight the violets Till the lovely flowers are gone Strange, that summer skies and sunshine Never seem one-half so fair As when winter's snowy pinions Shake the white down in the air !

If we knew the baby fingers Pressed against the window pane Would be cold and stiff to-morrow-Never trouble us again-Would the bright eyes of our darling Catch the frown upon our brow? Would the print of rosy fingers Vex us then as they do now?

Ah! those little ice-cold fingers How they point our memories back ! To the hasty words and actions Strewn along our backward track ! How those little hands remind us, As in snowy grace they lie, Not to scatter thorns-but roses-For our reaping by-and-by ! -Singing People.

LUCY SHERWOOD.

BY MATTIE DYER BRITTS. "Lucy !" Ruthie Sherwood's voice called her sister from the foot of the stairs, with something of a fretful accent.

went out, she wrote away industriously, until the papers were all copied nicely. Then she put on her hat and sacque, and prepared to carry them down to her father's office.

She walked rapidly down to Arch street, entered the big building, and carried the papers up to her father's room.

you have done them," said Mr. Sherwood, as he looked over them. "I think I shall have to call on you instead of Percy, in future."

and I thank you very much, my daughter," said her father.

And Lucy went home, feeling very happy indeed.

parlor, as usual. Mr. Sherwood, unlike many fathers, always spent his evenings at home, and liked to have them pass pleasantly. They were generally spent in reading, conversation, or music. And Mr. Sherwood never enjoyed himself better than when he was leaning back in his easy chair, listening to one of his litter daughters play. Upon this particular evening, Lucy sat down and played several pieces, ending with a new one which she had just learned.

"Lucy !" Ruthie called again.

"Well, what do you want ?" answered Lucy, up stairs.

"Please come down and show me how to play this 'Moonlight Waltz,'" said Ruthie.

"No, I can't. I want to read. You're always calling on me for something," responded Lucy, not quite pleasantly.

"Oh, please Lucy. I can't play it at all." "Well, give it up then."

"But I wan't to learn it so bad." "Work away at it then, but don't bother me." Ruthie turned slowly away, and went back to the parlor, while Lucy settled herself again to her charming book. But its charm was gone. She fixed her eyes on the page, but her thoughts kept wandering to the patient little sister down stairs, working away without any encouragement, and refused to take in the meaning of what she read.

Conscience was at work, and no one can find enjoyment in anything with a troubled conscience. Before long, Lucy laid down her book.

"I might have helped Ruthie," she said. "I know she would have helped me. I believe I'll go down and see if she is playing yet!"

She laid aside her book and ran down stairs, the faint sound of the piano telling her that Ruthie was still at her post. She opened the parlor door and went in.

"Well, Ruthie, got through with your waltz yet ?"

to help you."

"Oh, have you !" cried Ruthie, brightening up. "That's good, Lucy. I was ready to cry because you wouldn't come before."

"That would'nt mend matters," laughed Lucy. "I guess I was a little selfish then; but I thought better of it, you see."

Lucy replaced the sheet of music upon the rack, and Ruthie, under her direction, worked away faithfully a little while, until the difficulties were all mastered, and the melody flowed out clear and strong under her light fingers.

"There, now, I think you'll do. But I guess you have practised long enough for to-day," said Lucy. "I guess I have, I'm real tired," returned Ruthie; and rising, they both closed the piano, and then left the parlor.

As Lucy went through the hall, Ralph came from the dining-room singing :

> Each one may let every day Leave something good behind it!

he sang, and at the sight of Lucy, stopped his tune and came towards her.

"Ah, sister Lu! I want you awhile!" he said. "You promised to help me fix my kite, and I've got the frame all made, and now I'm ready."

"Oh, I----can't" was on Lucy's lips, but the song Ralph had been singing was in her mind, and

So Ruthie sat down and played the difficult piece through, very sweetly, without a single mistake. "Bravo, daughter !" cried her father. "Lucy must look out for her laurels. Did the fairies help the aid of complicated and costly machinery, warrants us In the above complaints it will be necessary to have br vou ?"

"Yes, sir, one of them did," returned Ruthie, with a bright glance at Lucy. "And I think I shall give her a kiss for doing it."

looked at them both with eyes of smiling approba- CHEAPEST, as well as the BEST. tion.

As Lucy was going up stairs, Ralph's song came into her head, and she hummed the concluding We employ no pedlars.

Each one may let every day Leave something good behind it.

"Yes, they may, and be the happier for it too," she said. "I've tried to make others happy to-day, and I'm sure I haven't been happier in a long time myself. Wonder if that is the secret ?"

For my part, I think it is. Some writer has beautifully said : "Happiness is a perfume which we cannot shed over others, without spilling a few drops upon ourselves;" and I believe it is true. Try it, my dear young readers. And be sure that whenever you succeed in making somebody else happy, you cannot fail to be happy yourself .-National Baptist.

IMMORTALITY OF THE SOUL.

An eminent Divine was once trying to teach a number of children that the soul would live after "No, I could'nt do anything with it," said they were dead. They listened, but evidently did not understand it; he was too abstract. Snatching "Let us try it again, then. I have come down his watch from his pocket, he said : "James, what is that I hold in my hand?"

"A watch, sir."

"A little clock," says another. "Do you all see it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Very well. Can any of you hear it tick? All listen now." After a pause : "Yes sir we ear it." He then took off the case, and held the case m one hand and the watch in the other.

"Now, children, which is the watch? You see there are two which are watches."

"The little one in your right hand, sir." "Very well again. Now I will lay the case aside-put it away, there-down in my hat. Now let us see if you can hear the watch tick."

"Yes, sir, we hear it," exclaimed several voices. "Well, the watch can tick, and go, and keep time you see, when the case is taken off, and put away in my hat."

"So it is with you, children; your body is nothing but the case, the soul is in the inside. The case, the body, may be taken off and buried in the well as this watch will go, as you see, when the case is off."

This made it plain, and even the youngest went | Fredericto home and told his mother that his "little soul

"Well, I guess I'm ready too," she said sweetly, putting the thoughts of the tempting book up stairs out of her mind. "Where is your frame and paper."

"Up in my room. Come on, Lu." So they went up stairs, and for an hour Lucy worked away which often lead men to barter honor and honesty faithfully with paste and paper, until the kite was for display. done.

ing it up. "I'm going to name her the Golden to attend. Star, and after awhile we'll see how she flies Thank you, Lu, for helping me."

"You're welcome, sir," returned Lucy, smilingly, pleased because she had made her brother happy "and now, if your demands are satisfied, I'll go."

"All right, so will I," said Ralph. Off he went to try his new kite, while Lucy sought her own room and took up her book again.

When she opened it the first sentence upon which her eyes fell was this:

"The true secret of being happy lies in trying to make others so."

"I believe that is true," said she, shutting her | prises. book. "I'm sure I have been happier helping Ruthie and Ralph than I would have been up here reading for my own selfish pleasure."

She opened her book again and for a little while read uninterupted. Then she heard her father's voice in the hall asking for Percy, her oldest brother. And she heard Ruth tell him that Percy had gone over to Camden.

"I am very sorry," said her father, "for I have some papers here for him to copy, that I am in a hurry to have done. I don't know what I shall do."

"There's a chance for you, Lvcy," whispered Sep. 23 would tick after he was dead,"

DRESSING WITH PLAINNESS.

1. It would lessen the burdens of many who find it hard to maintain their place in society.

2. It would lessen the force of the temptations

3. If there was less strife in dress at church, people "There ! isn't she a beauty !" cried Ralph, hold- in moderate circumstances would be more inclined

> 4. Universal moderation in dress at church would improve the worship by the removal of many wandering thoughts. 5. It would enable all classes of people to attend church better in unfavorable weather.

6. It would lessen, on the part of the rich, the temptation to vanity.

7. It would lessen, on the part of the poor, the temptation to be envious and malicious. 8. It would save valuable time on the Sabbath. 9. It would relieve our minds from a serious pressure, and thus enable us to do more for good enter-

A wealthy parishioner congratulated a poor pastor on the good air which he breathed in his parish; to which the latter replied; "Yes, the air would be good enough, if I could live upon it."

It is true of many persons that their memory is nothing but a row of hooks to hang old grudges

3. Because it refers to gentlemen of the greatest eminence in every country, who are ready to vouch for its high position

4. Because it has put by a large Reserve Fund, $5,000, 000, which of itself is more than enough to meet every con-

5. Because the Bonuses which have been declared, notwithstanding so large a sum has been put by in reserve, are larger than many offices of similar conditio

6. Because its annual income has hitherto been more than three times the amount of claims which are annually rovided for.

7. Because it gives Assurers in addition all those advantages which are made the especial features of other offices. 8. Because it has deposited with the Receiver General $100,000 as a guarantee to Canadian Policy-holders, that all claims will be met with promptitude, and in good faith.
