THE RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCER.

Poetry.

For the Religious Intelligencer. "BABY LILIAN."

RESPECTFULLY INSCRIBED TO MRS. C. B. A priceless treasure-a boon from heaven-A peerless Lily to thee has been given-To grace thy nuptial bower, You've tenderly nursed it day and night, Lest ought of evil should harm or blight The dainty spirit flower.

Queen Flora's jewels are passing fair, With their delicate tints and fragrance rare-Bright "nurslings of the skies;" But thou wilt not deem their charm complete As the lovely blossom tiny and sweet, That on thy bosom lies.

And oft for this cherished Lily of thine, For all needful blessings and favors Divine, Thou'lt breathe an earnest prayer : That when its dear presence the loving shall miss It may be transplanted to regions of bliss To bloom in beauty there. Canning, Q. C. LIZZIE.

THE CHRISTIAN'S DEATH.

Hush ! 'tis a holy place, The spirit's passing hour ; A mortal one hath run his race, A Christian claims his dower. Be still, nor let an earthly thought Mar the deep calmness of his lot.

Hath he not done with earth, Its glory and its pride? Its passing scenes of woe and mirth, Its pleasures scorn'd, though tried ? Hath he not conquered death and sin, And joy'd eternal life to win?

And toil or strife are o'er, And earthly cares are past, And he hath gained yon blessed shore, Hath won the palm at last, O, who would cling to mortal woe, When Heaven such glory can bestow?

In yon bright land above, How rich the deep repose! No cloud, by blasting sorrows wove, Its blighting shadow throws, No care obstructs the radiant light Where day ne'er shrinks from hastening night

Then follow we his tracks,

ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN. One of the most fatal mistakes-and a common one-leading to many beside itself, which I have often heard with amazement, is conveyed in the almost proverbial phrase : "The world owes me a living." The world does no such thing. It is not debtor to you, but you are debtor to it, and you cannot work too hard to discharge your obligation. It not only does not owe you anything, but it is not going to pay you anything except as you earn it. And just so fast as you do that, it will paynot wealth necessarily, not what you may call success or repute, but the honest return of wage, while God stands by to throw in his benediction to make up any deficiency. We are none of us going to thrive except by work-not by waiting for this or that, not by looking to this and the other man, not by expecting to be lifted, boosted into success. There are Micawbers all the world over-men waiting for the world to get ready to pay the obligation they suppose it to be under, men as miserably useless as they are contemptible. The fact is, this is a very busy world-a bit selfish if you will -and too thoroughly absorbed in various and varying interests to think much about individual men, young or old. Any of us is of mighty little consequence, and if you would like a healthy snub to your estimate of yourself, shut yourself up for a week, and see how superbly indifferent the world is as to your absence, and with what marvellous facility it accommodates itself to your loss. The fly upon the coach-wheel in the fable is not more insignificant. The only thing that gives significance to you is your work, your industry and fidelity. COURAGE IN EVERY-DAY LIFE .-- Have the conrage to discharge a debt while you have money in your pocket. Have the courage to do without that which you do not need, however much your eyes may covet

HOW AN ISLAND IS MADE.

There was a small pond in the pasture which the boys liked very much, to say nothing of the cows, who often, in a hot day, stood knee deep in it cooling themselves. Arthur wished there was an island in the pond for him to build a house on, and live like Robinson Crusoe,

"If we only had some coral insects to build us one," said Lily.

"Yes, indeed," cried Willie, " that would just be the thing. Can't father import some?" "Could he?" That was the question in the little group.

"But it would take them a great while," said Arthur; "they are awful slow workers. Why, it by long practice, that one often sees a Hindoo takes them ages to build an island."

"That is because they have to build up from the deep sea," said Lily. "Here the water is not deep at all."

"I should like to know just how islands do come," said Willie.

"I will tell you, Willie, or rather Mr. Kingsley shall, who knows more about it than I do. How does the coral rise out of water, and turn into hard point of the leaf upon which the afflicting news is stone? The coral polypus cannot build above highwater mark; but the surf which beats upon them puts his own name before that of the person to piles up the broken pieces, just as a sea-beach is piled up, and hammers them together with that a superior .- N. And then, as in the fashion of lime, the whole mass sets and becomes hard, as you may see mortar set; and so you have a low island a few feet above the sea. Then seabirds come to it, and rest and build; and seeds are floated to it from far lands, and among them almost always is the cocoanut, which loves to grow by the sea-shore; and so groves of cocoa grow up produces it in plaster of Paris. This is done by on the lonely isle, Then, perhaps, trees and bushes are drifted there by the trade winds, and entangled in the roots are the seeds of other plants, and eggs of insects; and so a few flowers and a few butterflies and beetles set up for themselves on the new land. And then a bird or two, caught in a storm and blown away to sea, finds shelter in the cocoa grove; and so a little new world is set up, in which, you know, there are no four-footed beasts, nor snakes, nor lizards, nor frogs, nor any animal that cannot cross the sea.

There is the famous cocoa-nut crab, for instance, which learned figure in marble. This is entirely mechanical, and men call bergus letro, A great crab he is, who, instead of crawling, like our crabs, walks on the tips of his toes, a foot above the ground; and because he has often nothing to eat but cocoa-nuts, cocoa-nuts he has learned to eat, and after a fashion that it would puzzle you to imitate. Sailors say he climbs up the tree, but that is not true. What he does is this: when he finds a fallen cocoa-nut, he begins tearing away the thick husk or fibre with his strong claws; and he knows perfectly well which end to tear it from, namely, from the end where the three eye-holes are-out of one of which, you know, the young cocoa-nut tree would he hammers through one of them with the point of busy : He rested once from that great work of his heavy claw. So far, so good; but how is our creation: but yet, "My Father," saith our Lord, claw in. He has no proboscis, like a butterfly, to works of providence and grace.
