HEIRSHIP.

Little store of wealth have I ; Not a rood of land I own; Nor a mansion fair and high, Built with towers of fretted stone ; Stocks, nor bonds, nor title-deeds, Flocks nor herds have I to show ; When I ride, no Arab steeds Toss for me their manes of snow.

I have neither pearls nor gold, Massive plate, nor jewels rare ; Broidered silks of worth untold, Nor rich robes a queen might wear. In my garden's narrow bound Flaunt no costly tropic blooms, Lading all the air around With a weight of rare perfumes.

Yet to an immense estate Am I heir, by grace of God-Richer, grander than doth wait Any earthly monarch's nod. Heir of all the Ages, I-Heir of all that they have wrought, All their store of emprise high, All their wealth of precious thought.

Every golden deed of theirs Sheds its lustre on my way ; All their labors, all their prayers Sanctify this present day ! Heir of all that they have earned By their passion and their tears-Heir of all that they have learned Through the weary, toiling years!

Heir of all the faith sublime On whose wings they soared to heaven; Heir of every hope that Time taken off. Bad habits are like a ragged suit of clothes. They let in the sleet and snow, and look the worse the longer they are worn. So, Charles, keep off your bad habits, and wear your good ones, and you shall neither be cold, wet nor hungry.

To earth's fainting sons hath given ! Aspiration pure and high-Strength to dare and to endure-Heir of all the Ages, I-Lo! I am no longer poor!

C. Yes, William, I believe you are right. I know that yours is the happiest road, and I shall try to keep your company.

WM. That's right, Charles. And now keep your eye fixed upon the end you have in view: turn neither to the right nor left: take not one step aside in either direction : remember that God will be on your side and will help you. With such help, who can tear you away from the path of safety ?

C. Well done, William! you have shown yourself to be a good soldier ; and there is none who does not admire a good soldier; and were all Sunday school teachers, scholars and temperance men as faithful as you, and as plain and simple in regard to their doctrines as you have been, their cause would be more prosperous. However, William, I must be going ; it is almost seven o'clock.

WM. Well, good bye, Charles: hold on to the right way, and be sure to keep in the Sunday school hills of Scotland, where my father had a large sheepfarm. 'Temperance' was never heard of then, and The above will be sold at lowest prices for cash at the every day for dinner we had home-made beer, and all drank as much as they wanted ; and no friend ever came in without being asked to have some old whisky. On market and fair days I have seen men come home sick, as the little folks were told ; and all the remark that would be made about it was, 'Folks must have a little fun, sometimes.' I used to think that getting sick was queer fun; bnt as I grew to understand that it was the whisky that made them sick, I would wonder how people would take so much trouble to brew anything that made them sick and cross for a long time after they drank it.

"One day I shall never forget; we were in the kitchen with our mother, who was speaking very kindly to a poor grazy woman, who had stopped to Dec. 24 rest and beg a cup of milk. Mother felt so sorry for the old waman, that she brought a glass of hot whisky and offered it to her. In an instant, glass and whisky were burled to the back of the fire. How her eyes sparkled! She screamed out, ' How dare you give mea drink of fire-fire, I say ?' We did not know what to think, and clung to mother, who tried to quiet the old woman, but it was of no use.
