THE WORLD'S HARVEST. BY HORACE B. DURANT.

Look out abroad upon The world, and everywhere, beneath thine eye, Behold the fields already ripened for The harvest. See what hosts of priceless and Immortal souls are ready to be saved Or lost eternally! Hark to the cry For help that comes from many a distant land. And from the islands of the sea! Aye, here Is work, a mighty work. Behold it all Around us; in the streets and alleys of 'The crowded city; in the bamlet and The town; within the quiet dell, and o'er The hill and plain: in every highway of Our land, and at our very side, we see Imploring hands stretched forth for help; we hear The agonizing cry of multitudes Fast sinking down to ruin

Work, work, work! Oh! who will work with heart and head and hands To elevate the mind above the gloom Of ignorance and error? Who will work To break the crowning walls of churchly pride And hierarchy down, that have so long, In their misguided zeal and bigotry, Divided man from man, retarded truth And Christianity, and from the soul Shut out the light of heaven? Who will work To stem the tide of infidelity And trashy, sickly sentimentalism, And fashionable vice and folly, that, From pulpit, press, and stage, is flooding all Our land with moral death ?

Awake! ye who Are slumbering in idleness. The summer of Thy life will soon be ended. Very soon The reaper Death will come, with sickle keen, And cut thee down, and then thy harvest will Be passed forever. Work, so that thy thoughts, Thy words, thy deeds, as blessed fruitage, may Be garnered up for heaven.

truding between anger and unforgiving justice, slayed his arm. He went down stairs, and left the boy lying in the middle of the floor, as he had dropped from his hand-motionless as if life were extinct. He met the pale, suffering mother below-she loved the boy tenderly, and had felt every smarting blow-but passed her without a word. She had seen Willie as he encoutered his father at the door, and understood the meaning of this heavy punishment.

Mr. Ellis went out into the porch to breathe the free air, and cool the sudden excitement under which he had been laboring. As he shut the door behind him, in a kind of instinctive effort to separate himself from a painful scene, he stood face to face with Mr. Wheeler. A hand grasped his hand in a quick, strong pressure. "It was a brave act, sir! He's a noble boy! Where is he?"

"I don't understand you," said Mr. Ellis looking bewildered.

"Didn't he tell you ?" "Tell me what?"

" How he sprang into the river and saved my little Eddie's life ?"

came over to play with Eddie; and Eddie wanted to go down to the river, but Willie said he couldn't go the river. I heard Eddie coaxing him; but Willie was firm, because he said you had told him not to go. I was so pleased at his obedient spirit. Well, I lost sight of them after a little while; but, as I learn, Eddie would go down to the river, and your boy, followed him, but kept at a distance from the water. Instead of climbing over the logs and barrels, or getting into the boats, he sat by himself away off. Then, sir, my Eddie, in leaning over the river, slipped and fell in; and your boy, instead of running away, half frightened out of his senses, as most children of his age would have done, sprang to the wharf, and into the water after Eddie. I wondered they were not both drowned. It was only in God's mercy that they were saved. When the man who saw what happened got to the place, and looked over the dock into the water, there was Willie, holding on to a ring in one of the logs, with his right hand, and clinging to Eddie with his left. Such courage and presence of mind in a boy almost surpasses belief? Where is he? He ran on home as soon as the man lifted him from the water. I must thank him for his noble
