OVER THE RIVER.

Over the river they beckon to me-Loved ones who've crossed to the farther side; The gleam of their snowy robes I see, But their voices are drowned in the rushing tide, There's one with ringlets of sunny gold, And eyes the reflection of heaven's blue. He crossed in the twilight gray and cold, And the pale mist hid him from mortal view.

We saw not the angels that met him there; The gate of the city we could not see: Over the river, over the river, My brother stands waiting to welcome me.

Over the river, the boatman pale, Carried another-the household pet; Her brown curls waved in the gentle gale ... Darling Minnie, I see her yet.

She crossed on her bosom her dimpled hands, And fearlessly entered the phantom bark, We watched it glide from the silver sands, And all our sunshine grew strangely dark.

We know she is safe on the other side, Where all the ransomed angels be, Over the river, the mystic river, My childhood's idol is waiting for me.

For none return from those quiet shores, Who cross with the boatman, cold and pale, We hear the dip of the golden oars, And catch a glimpse of the snowy sail.

And lo ! they have passed from our yearning hearts, They cross the stream and are gone for aye; We may not sunder the veil apart That hides from our vision the gates of day.

We only know that their barks no more Sail with us o'er life's stormy sea; Yet somewhere, I know, on the unseen shore, They watch, and beckon, and wait for me.

And I sit and think, when the sunset's gold Is flushing river, and hill, and shore, I shall one day stand by the water cold, And list for the sound of the boatman's oar.

I shall watch for a gleam of the flapping sail; I shall hear the boat as it nears the strand, I shall pass from sight with the boatman pale To the better shore of the spirit land.

I shall know the loved who have gone before, And joyful sweet will the meeting be, back to bed again. I lay down, feeling morelike a condemned criminal than anything else. No one in the house had seen me; but, oh! it seemed as if everybody knew it, and I should never dare to meet my father's face again. It was a great while before I went to sleep. I heard my parents come home, and with shame I hid my face under the sheet. But I could not hide myself from a sense of God's presence. His eyes seemed everywhere, searching the very depths of my heart. It led to thoughts CELEBRATED PERFECTED SPECTACLES which, God be praised, I never forgot. If I was ever tempted to any secret sin, 'Thou God seest strained and awed."-London Tract. FAMILY GOVERNMENT. AS MANAGED BY SOME HUSBANDS. What ought, what can a mother do, when a good, pleasant, careless husband constantly thwarts all her efforts to teach or govern the children, and yet can not be made to see or feel what he is doing? Let us illustrate a sketch from memory, not magination: "Mamma, please give me a piece of pie?" "No, darling, one piece is enough." "Half a piece, please, mamma ?" "No, Freddie, no more." "A very little piece, mamma dear?" "No, Freddie, no."

"Do give the child a little piece; I'll risk its hurting him." And the mother gives it.

"Mamma, may I go out to play ?" "It's very chilly, and you have a cold; I don't think it is best." "Bundle me up warm, mamma, and I won't take cold."

"I fear you will. You must play in doors to-day."

"Just a little while, please, mamma?" "No, Freddie, you must not go out to-day." "Do let the child go out. What a girl you are making of him. Women never were fitted to bring up boys. Dress him warm, and let him run; it will do him good."

And Freddie went out. "May I have my blocks in the parlor, namma?"

"No, Willie, make your block house in the dining room. Miss L. is an invalid, and I want the parlor very quiet."

"I'll be very quiet." "You will intend to be, but you cannot help making some noise, and as Miss L. very rarely goes anywhere, I fear she will be very tired at bet; so be a good little boy and play in the dining room this afternoon." "I won't make a bit of noise, nor tire her one speck. "You must play in the dining-room, Willie, and not say more about it." "Nonsense, it will do her good to see a happy little face. It will give her something besides her own pains and aches to think of.

THE PEAR TREE.

"Four little words did me more good when I was a boy, than almost anythig else," said a gentlemother taught me."

"Indeed ! What were the four little words ?" He answered by relating the following story :

" My father grafted a pear-tree; it was a very choice graft, and he watched it with great care. The second year it blossomed, and it bore but one pear. They were said to be a good kind of pear, and my father was quite anxious to see if they were really so. This single pear, then, was an object of some concern to my father. He wanted it to become fully ripe; the high winds he hoped would not blow off the pear ; and he gave express directions to the children on no account to touch it. The graft was low, and easily reached by us. It grew well. 'I think that graft will meet my expectations,' said my father, many times. 'I hope now there is some prospect of our having good pears.'

"Everybody who came into the garden he took to the graft, and all said, 'It will prove to be a most excellent pear.'

"Is it not almost ripe? I long for a bite,' I cried as I followed my father one day down the alley to the pear-tree.

"Wait patiently, my child, it will not be fully ripe for a week," said he.

"I thought I loved pears better than anything else, often I used to stop and look longingly, up to this. 'Oh, how nice it looks !' I used to think, smacking my lips: 'I wish it was all mine.'

"The early apples did not taste as good; the currants were not as relishing, and the damsons I thought nothing of in comparison with this pear. The longer I stayed alone under this beautiful peartree, the greater my longing for it became, until I was seized with the idea of getting it. 'Oh, I wish I had it,' was the selfish thought that gradually rose in my mind.

"One night, after we were in bed, my brothers fell asleep long before I did; I tossed about, and could not go to sleep. It was a warm, still summer night; there was no moon; no noise except the hum of numberless insects. My father and my mother were gone out. I put my head out of the window, and peeped into the garden. I snuffed pleasant smells. I glanced in the direction of the pear-tree. My mouth was parched; I was thirsty; I thought how good a juicy pear would taste. I was tempted.

WHAT DECISION DID.

In the West lived a very proud, wealthy infidel and irreligious father, who, having one day called his family together, told them, if they went to the LEMAN, Hahfax, N. The daughter, however, continued to test of its stability. go to the prayer-meetings, and soon found peace in believing in Jesus. When an opportunity was afforded to make a profession, she meekly arose, and spoke of the "great change" in her heart, and of high position her faith in the Saviour.

The news was immediately carried to the father | tingenc, of the young lady. Having come home that night, she was met at the door by her father, standing are larger than many offices of similar condition. with the Bible in his arms.

"Maria," said he, "I have been told that you provided for. have publicly professed, to night, that you have religion. Is that so?"

"Father," said the girl, "I love you; and I think I love the Saviour, too."

Opening his Bible to a blank leaf, and pointing with his finger, said :

"Maria, whose name is that ?"

" It is my name sir ?"

"Did I not tell you that I would disinherit you if you got religion ?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well I must do it. You cannot come into my nouse." And tearing the leaf out of the Bible, "There, said he," "so do I blot out your name neighborhood, and heard no more from her father for three weeks. But one morning seeing her father's carriage driving up to the door, she ran out, and said to the driver : "What is the matter, James?"

"Your father is very sick, and thinks he is going to die; and he is afraid he shall go to hell for his wickedness, and the grievous wrong he has done you in disinheriting you, and turning you from his house. He wants you to jump into the carriage
