DO SOMETHING.

If the world seems cold to you, Kindle fires to warm it! Let their comfort hide from view Winters that deform it. Hearts as frozen as your own To that radiance gather:

You will soon forget to mourn, "Ah! the cheerless weather!"

If the world's a "wilderness," Go build houses in it! Will it help your loneliness, On the winds to din it?

Raise a hut however slight, Weeds and brambles smother; And to roof and meal invite Some forlorner brother.

If the world's "a vale of tears," Smile, till rainbows span it; Breathe the love that life endears: Clear from clouds to fan it. Of your gladness lend a gleam Unto souls that shiver;

Show them how dark sorrow's stream Blends with hope's bright river! -Selected.

BABY-SISTER.

Polly and James were very glad indeed when they first saw their baby-sister. She was such a wee, tiny, little thing, not much bigger than Polly's doll. But she was very pretty, and had bright blue

"Oh, do let me nurse her a minute," said Polly. "Why," said James, "I am sure it would not be right. She is such a little mite, I would be afraid to touch her least I might break her." Polly laughed at that. "Oh, James, as if she were made of china, or wax, like a doll." "Well, I am sure if you were to let her fall her bones might be broken. Just look at her arms, they are not much bigger than pencils."

"Yes, but of course I would not let her fall," said Polly, "I know better than that, I would hold her tight, and not move from this foot-stool all the

Polly was allowed to hold her baby-sister " a little minute," as she said, though I think she kept her | "Hope! of all ills that men endure, for at least five minutes at the usual length. "O what a darling!" said she; "not much heavier than pussy, and so quiet and good, and look, James, I do believe she is laughing." "Pooh! I don't suppose she knows how to laugh yet," said James. "But she is a pretty little creature, and I think I should like to hold her a mi-

So, although boys do not make such good nurses as girls do, still James held the little baby very carefully, and gave her several soft kisses.

"I never saw such tiny little fingers," he said " Do look Polly, they are not much bigger than toys." Polly looked, and could hardly help dancing at the sight.

"Oh, James," she said, "there is not a thimble made small enough for her, is there ?" "And what good would a thimble be to her?" said James. "You are silly to think of such things,

"Well, but do you know, James, she will want a thimble when she is as old as I am."

"Yes; but then she will have grown bigger, of "What would you like the baby's name to be?"

said their father. "O, father! please may we choose it? We did want to; but nurse said she thought you would not like us to." "Well, I think you may, if you choose a pretty

"Now let us think," said Polly. "I say let it be Mabel."

"Oh no, not Mabel," said James. "I should love her to be Topsy." "Oh, James, how can you?" said his sister;

"Topsy is a black girl, and our our sweet little babysister is as fair as a lily." "Well, call her Lily." "No, I do not like that for a name."

"Very well let it be Rose." "That is very pretty," said Polly, "but I think there is some better still." "You cannot have anything better than Topsy," it did. said James; "then you know we can call her Tops for shortness,"

"O, James, I am sure she would not at all like that for a name," "Perhaps she would like it Kate, for then you know we could call her Kitty." "No, James, that is what we name the pussy, that would never do."

"Well what would you like?" "Let us get a book with the meanings of names and pick one out." yet they could not agree what the baby's name and neither was willing to give up. That was so kicks, and knocks, and cross words. To be spoken very sad that their mamma was obliged to decide to kindly, and have a present made to him, was it for them. She said it must be Clara. That is a very pretty name, and those children soon learnt to love it, because they so much loved their dear lit-

One day their father came to them with a very "Clara is so ill," he said "that mamma is afraid she may die. There must be no noise to-day, and you will have to be very quiet at your play." But they did not want to play at all when they heard that; they were so very sorry, they could not help crying. "O! what should they do," they said, "if she were to die, and be taken away from us, where we shall never see her any more? It would be too

"But Jesus loves little children-even babies," said their father, " and if our little Clara were to die, He would take her into His arms and carry her to heaven, where she would be so happy.'

" But I think we want her most," said little Polly "and if Jesus lived here I should go and ask Him to please not take our baby away, because we love

" But He can hear just as well now. He is in heaven," said their father.

"O, let us ask Him," said James. "Come upstairs with me, then," said Polly, " and we will ask bim at once." So they crept upstairs softly, and walked on tiptoe not to make a noise, and shut the door, and held a little prayer-meeting. They could not sing but James read a few verses from his Testament about Jesus laying His hands upon the little children's heads, and blessing them. Then they knelt down, and each of them prayed.

They did not say long prayers, only-"Dear Saviour, please do not take our little sister Clara, because we love her so, but please make her better."

They said it over many times, and they said it from their hearts. And the kind Friend who loves little children heard them, and he must have touched the baby, for she began to get better. And the next day the doctor told them that she would live. Oh, how pleased they were! and they did not forget to give thanks.

"We will never be unkind to Clara," they said, because we have prayed for her, and Jesus has given her back to us."

And they kept their promise. Even when little Clara grew older and stronger, and sometimes cried, as babies will, they were always kind and patient, and tried to please her.

"We did not know how much we loved her untill she was so ili," said James.

And Polly said, "As soon as she is able to understand, we will tell her that we prayed for her, then she will know that Jesus Christ will hear her too."

WHAT OF LIFE?

When we look out upon the moving, acting, living world, and remember that every motion is suggested, that every act is executed, by one who treads for himself the maze of life, the fancy is hushed to silence, broken only by an uncontrollable sigh as we look into the registrar of each human soul. What of life? we ask, while of earth we but give to her our strength; while in need we can find none but the needy; while in pain we meet none but the suffering; while in distress we hear but the cries of grief from others? Darkness of night, like the lever upon the wheel, checks the moving world to the outward eye, but yet it goes throbbing, beating, in the stillness of the soul, perplexed that the light of day shall reveal nothing clearer in the labyrinth of What of life? may we not ask, when we live but to live, when our highest success of to-day is but to secure a rational hope of existing in another. Yet who has not, while travelling through this Sahara, come upon the well of hope bubbling up with sweetest cheer? Somewhere in the soul of man is a fountain, which seldom dries up, from which comes gushing like the pure waters from the fountain of life—the hope that the future will retrieve every reverse, and that the bright sunshine of actual success will light up the path of life. How like the morning sun, after a dark night, is man to himself when upon the swelling emotions of a hopeful future he rises above every cloud, and how, looking upon that side upon which the sun shines, everything seems transformed into his own glory. But what for all this? What a cheat! and how easily we become its victims.

The only cheap and universal cure! Thou captive's freedom, and thou sick man's health, Thou lover's victory, and thou beggar's wealth!".

The problem of life is solved by no mathematical rule, but has unlike proportions with each individual, and new conditions developing each day. How overwhelming seems the task of beating our way to some point of success, to some station in life, where but the honors of men may be lifted upon us; and how like the rending of the soul comes the calamity, when we see the waters troubled, and another steps in before us. But this is not our all of life. There are two ways of success. The cunning will find the world, in this respect, asleep, and many steal upon the post of ease and honor; while the devoted and faithful may live to see their brightest anticipations achieved as the result of their manly course. While the multitude push thoughtlessly through the course of time, he who stops, and stoops, may gather the "value of days" from the dust of other men's feet. Everywhere do we find the clay already trodden from which we may make our brick. Let him who would have life's purest honors crown consciousness of his own noble manhood realized in him, persist in that honest, earnest course which knows no defeat, and feels no rebuke, and he shall ENTIRE STOCK OF DRY GOODS AT realize here something more than hope's dreamy visions or fancy's cunning smiles.

THE POWER OF A KIND WORD.

A little boy named Willie H, used to pass by a lady's house every day, as he drove a neighbour's cow to pasture and back again. He was a very bad boy. He used to swear dreadfully, and was very rude. The lady who lived in this house always called her children into the house, if they | will give them prompt and careful attention. were playing on the pavement when Willie was going by. She didn't want them to hear the terrible oaths that he swore. One day this lady thought she would try and do some good to this poor neglected boy. And I want you to notice what she did; how little it cost her, and yet how much good

As he was driving the cow past, one morning, she called him kindly to her and said: "Willie, my boy, do you go to school?"

A gruff "No" was the only reply. "Can you read?"

"Not much; and I don't want to." The lady pitied the boy. He had no instruction and no encouragement at home. His parents were not only poor, but very wicked. He had no one to help him to do right.

"Will you stop here a minute on your way back, They did so. They read down all the names and Willie?" said the lady: "there is something I want

Willie nodded his head with a look of wonder. One wanted it to be one thing, and one another, He was not used to have anything given to him but

As soon as he was gone, the lady got a nice New Testament, and wrote his name in it. He called on Black and Steel Striped Silks; new While and Colored of this scason's importations of the above goods will be his way back, and got his Testament. The kindness of the lady and the interest she seemed to take in him had a good effect upon him. He promised the lady that he would try to spell out and read at least one verse every day in his Testament, He also promised her to come to the Sunday-school next Sunday. And he kept his promise. A year passed away. And after that a great change had taken place in Willie H. He was always in his place at church. It was pleasant to see him sit there, with his eyes fastened on the minister, as if he were alraid to lose a single word that he was saying. And as often as Sabbath came round, Willie would be seen with his little Testament in his hand, and his clothes brushed clean, on his way to Sabbath-school. His lesson was always well learned; and the rough, ragged, swearing boy, who was a plague to the village a year before had become and Barbados Sugar; 80 boxes Layer and Valencia Rai one of the best boys in the neighborhood. Now how very little it cost that good lady to speak a kind word to the rude swearing cow-boy, if Willie grows up to be a good man, a Sundayschool teacher, and a member of the church, and lives a life of usefulness, who can tell how much good will result from this one kind act of that Christian lady?

SPEIGHT'S PATENT DESIDERATUM GLUE POT. T has hitherto been found in using any of the Domestic I Glue Pots now before the public, that they have generally caused disappointment, for the Flue as soon as suficiently heated, as speedily becomes chilled, owing to the ooling of the small quantity of water which can be used n melting the Glue. This inconvenience is avoided in the use of "SPEIGHT'S PATENT DESIDERATUM GLUE OT," where the Family Night Light not only dissolves the Glue, but will keep it in a hot and liquid state for everal hours, and the necessity and manifest inconvenence is therefore obviated of having to place the Glue Pot on the bars of a hot grate or over a gas jet, as has been sually recommended, and is absolutely necessary in the ise of any other Glue Pot. Another great improvement the inner cup of porcelain which can be at any time renoved for cleaning, and will be found equally useful for lissolving Gum, Isinglass, Gelatine, or any other adhe-

The advantage of having a Glue Pot, the separate parts of which can be removed and cleaned, and when neces-sary renewed, is sufficient alone to recommend the article o public use, and altogether will be found of a character imensely superior to any other of the Domestic Glue Pots hitherto supplied, and will be admitted as a DESIDE RATUM IN EVERY HOUSEHOLD, SHOP, OR COUNTING HOUSE.
