"I have labored in vain," a teacher said, And her brow was marked by care; And bitter and sad were the tears she shed

In that moment of dark despair. "I am weary and worn, and my hands are weak, And my courage is well-nigh gone; For none give heed to the words I speak, An in vain for a promise of fruit I seek,

Where the seed of the Word is sown." And again with a sorrowful heart she wept,-Eor her spirit with grief was stirred,-Till the night grew dark; and at last she slept, attempt.

And a silent calm o'er her spirit crept, And a whisper of "Peace" was heard.

And she thought in her dreams that the soul took | comfortable. flight,-She saw a throne of pure dazzling light,-

To a blessed and bright abode; And harps were ringing; and robes were white, Made white in a Saviour's blood.

And she saw such a countless throng around As she never had seen before;

Their brows with jewels of light were crowned, And sorrow and sighing no place had found, For the troubles of time were o'er.

There a white-robed maiden came forth, and said, "Joy! joy! for thy trials are past! I am one that thy gentle words have led In the narrow pathway of life to tread-

I welcome thee home at last !" And the teacher gazed on the maiden's face,-She had seen that face on earth; When with anxious heart, in her wonted place, She had told her charge of a Saviour's grace,

And their need of a second birth. Then the teacher smiled, and an angel said, "Go forth to thy work again;

It is not in vain that the seed is shed; If only one soul to the cross is led, Thy labour is not in vain."

And she rose in joy, and her eye was bright, Her sorrow and grief had fled; And her soul was calm, and her heart was bright, For her hands were strong in her Saviour's might, As forth to her work she sped.

Then rise, fellow teacher, to labor go; Wide scatter the precious grain; Though the fruit may never be seen below, Be sure that the seed of the Word shall grow; Toil on in faith, and thou soon shalt know "Thy labor is not in vain!"

BESSIE'S MOTTO.

BY AMANDA M. DOUGLAS.

"Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might." That was Bessie Thorpe's motto for the week; she and her mother always chose them on Sunday from a book of Scriptural proverbs. They opened the book, and placed their finger on a verse, and then made it a sort of guide or pattern, or drew comfort from it, as the case might be.

"I don't like it very much," said Bessie in a disappointed tone. "I wanted some thing sweet and tender. Think of yours-'Love one another."

"But yours is very good," replied mamma, with in his favor." "There is always so much work to do. And one does not want to look for it in the Bible." "One finds it there, nevertheless."

Bessie had swept and dusted, wiped dishes, and studied lessons, with all her might, so far. This was Wednesday, and the clothes had come up from the wash. It was a summer afternoon, four o'clock. Bessie came home from school, hung up her sun- Dana's. Was it because they worked, and played, hat, and glanced into the room, which was off from and loved with all their might?

He was always tormenting Bessie too, and his stockings had twice as many holes as those of the others. So, no wonder Bessie said: "O dear!"

She mended her own first. They had only a ladylike little break just above the heel. Frank's were not very bad.

"Here is a note for you," said Mrs. Thorpe. "Mrs. Dina's girl brought it, and is waiting for an answer." "O mamma! it's an invitation to tea! Bessie had said, "I don't think I ever will go to Carrie Dana's again, she always makes you uncomfortable;" and now she thought of it.

Kate and Elsie Allen might have looked better in something beside the deep rose-pink chambray "I have labored in vain;" she bowed her head, on this warm day, but they were glad to see Bessie, so she did not remember that against them.

> "Can't we play croquet?" asked Elsie. "Oh! it's too warm," returned Carrie. "And you look almost roasted now," with a slight laugh. "Let us have the checkers out here then," said Kate. "I am very fond of a good game."

"There can only two play it; besides the pieces might roll around and get lost, and papa would be "O dear! what shall we do?" was Elsie's next

But Carrie was selfish, and made her love of order and neatness positive faults.

There were sundry pleasurable exclamations now. It seemed as if the little party might have a delightful time. But Carrie hovered around her cousins

"Oh! don't touch that! I'm afraid you'll break that. "I don't have my nice wax-doll out, except on special occasions; its eyes might get out of order. And this one's pretty hair gets rough. I've just dressed that one clean, and Mary scolds about having so many dresses to do up."

Something came into Bessie's mind-" doing it with all her might"-whether it were play, or work, or study. The motto was good for something, after all. She began to feel very sorry for the two little

"Oh! no. I am tired of stories, I read so much." "Let us go down and swing, then."

"Oh! yes," and Elsie started. There could be no objection to this, Bessie thought. But Carrie managed to make it uncomfortable, and finally dragged Bessie away, though the little girls had a much nicer time by themselves. Presently they were summoned to tea, Mrs. Dana was a fashionable woman, with a listless air, as it she was tired of everything.

The supper was delightful and beautifully arranged; but somehow Bessie could not help admitting that they had a great deal more fun and enjoyment at home. She was to leave at half-past seven, so as to be sure to reach home before dark. Bessie felt tired and dispirited, too, and walked rapidly to get up a little glow and fervor. She always come home depressed from Carrie Dana's. There were several people in the sitting-room. Doctor Gregg

By degrees she heard the story. Bertie had been climbing up a steep side hill, when a stone had given way, rolling over and over with him, bruising, stunning, and almost killing him.

"I guess he will pull through," said Doctor Gregg, cheerfully. "He is sound healthy boy, and that is variety, for Ladies' and Gentlemen's wear. By and by the house was cleared, Rob put to bed,

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring to Gray Hair its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable. healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. It soon restores faded or gray hair to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed; but such as remain can be saved by this application, and stimulated into activity, so that a new growth of hair is produced. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. The restoration of vitality it gives to the scalp arrests and prevents the formation of dandruff, which is often so uncleanly and offensive. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a HAIR DRESSING, nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre, and a grateful perfume.

CHURNS! CHURNS! CHURNS! HEALTH! TIME! MONEY! WHYSHOULD IBUY KITCHEN'S PATENT CHURN?

DECAUSE they preserve health, save time, save money, and the churning is all done in 5 or 10 minutes. You will then believe what I assure you is true, viz.; That I have for sale the best churn ever invented—Kitchen's Patent Rotary Double Dasher. This churn has two Dashers, each revolving in an opposite direction It is useless to attempt a description of this churn in an advertisement, it has to be seen to be appreciated. It is estimated by practical farmers that it will produce one-tenth more butter from the same quantity of cream than any other churn now in use The public are respectfully requested to call at my store, examine the article, and select for ELY PERKINS, Fredericton, April 22, 1870.
