"ABIDE WITH ME."

farewell sermon to his flock, whom declining health compelled him to leave. He was a victim of consumption, and was about to spend the winter in Italy, with the faint hope of some relief from his sufed people, and faint and weary he went back to his quiet, rural parsonage. In the evening, surrounde by his family, he sat down and composed the touch so wrote the hymn commencing, "Jesus, I my cross have taken," as well as many other sweet lyries. Abide with me! Fast falls the eventide; The darkness deepens; Lord, abide with me! When other helpers fail, and comforts flee, Help of the helpless, O abide with me. Swift to its close epos out life's little due Earth's joys grow dim; its glories pass away; Change and decay in all around I see;

O Thou, who changest not, abide with me! Not a brief glance I beg, a passing word; But as thou dwell'st with Thy disciples, Lord-Familiar, condescending, patient, free-Come not to sojourn, but abide with me!

Come not terrors, as the King of kings, But kind and good, with healing in Thy wings; Tears for all woes, a heart for every plea: Come, Friend of sinners, thus abide with me:

Thou on my head in early youth didst smile, And, though rebellious and perverse meanwhile, Thon hast not left me, oft as I left Thee: On to the close, O Lord, abide with me!

I need Thy presence every passing hour; What but Thy grace can foil the tempter's power Who like Thyself my guard and stay can be? Through cloud and sunshine O abide with me.

I fear no foe with Thee at hand to bless; Ills have no weight and tears no bitterness: Where is death's sting? where, grave, thy victory I triumph still if Thou abide with me! Hold Thou Thy cross before my closing eyes;

Shine through the gloom and point me to the skies! Heaven's morning breaks, and earth's vain shadows flee:

In life and death, O Lord, abide with me!

POLAR LIFE.

Next to the deer, the walrus is of most value to Greenlanders. It was on a bright August day, when for the first time I saw a herd of these im-A few years ago, on a Sunday afternoon at the mense beasts. The largest was not less than twenty close of autumn, an English clergyman preached his | feet long, and weighed two thousand pounds. The neck was short and thick, the head small, the tusks long, and the feet resembled broad, fin-like paddles. When on land their movements are slow and awkferings. The last farewell was uttered to his belov- ward, but in the water, they move with great rapidity and power. When pursued by the hunter, they display almost human intelligence. When in | Plaid. ing and precious hymn so well known with the winter the walrus comes out of the water, he breaks nov 10 above title. The writer was Rev. Dr. Lyte, who al- up the ice with an explosive puff which may be heard for miles. In the meantime the hunter is lying on the ice awaiting the favorite moment. His nov 10 instrument of attack is a large harpoon, to which is fastened a strong line, of many fathoms length, made of walrus-hide. The other end of the line is attached to a rod of bone pointed with iron, to be driven into the ice. The moment comes. The walrus rises breast-high anove the ice, and looks around as if half suspicious that some foe is nigh. In an instant the hunter is on his feet, and the harpoon is buried under the flipper of the beast. With desperation the STEAM ENGINE AND MACHINE SHOP walrus plunges beneath the water, and the hunter drives the iron pointed rod into the solid ice, which holds the line securely. Finding himself fast, the wounded beast comes to the surface again, looks around, observes where the stick is that holds tight | JOHN SMITH, - - - - PROPRIETOR the line, again descends, comes up and breaks the ice just where the staff had been planted; but knowing the cunning of the walrus, the hunter has hauled in his line and planted his stick in another place. And thus the struggle goes on between skill and force, till the beast is exhausted and the game secured. But with all his strength and cunning, the walrus is no match for the polar bear. In August the walrus makes his way to the shore, draws his huge body upon the rocks, and there basks in the sunshine. Ever watching for his prey, the bear | PLOUGH. mounts the over-hanging cliffs, and lifting a large rock with his fore-paws, and calculating the distance and the curvature with the accuracy of a mathematician, he hurls the rock on the animal's head, crushing in the ponderous skull; then, like an arrow, the bear rushes down the cliff, and if the walrus still lives, he hammers away with the same rock till the beast is dead. Bear hunting is one of the most exciting scenes of the polar regions. A large she-bear, with a fourmonths-old cub, was attacked first by the dogs, which she caught up and flung, first one and then another, to a great distance. During the struggle, the cub was wounded with a pistol-ball. At once the mother placed the cub between her hind-legs, and shoving it along, sought flight; but wounded Brands.)
