

A SONG OF THANKS. "I will give thanks" for blessings strewn

Across my pilgrim way; For loving-kindness Thou hast shewn Thy servant day by day.

"I will give thanks" for friendships made With honored saints of God; I will give thanks for loved ones laid Beneath the silent sod.

"Thanks" for the cup of unmixed joy Filled to the very brim ; Thanks, too, for bitter grief's alloy, And eyes for sorrow dim.

"I will give thanks" for wayside streams Whereat my soul hath drunk ; For impulse from thy quickening beams, When hope had well nigh sunk.

Thanks for the "word of truth" which brought My soul her daily food; Thanks for the "all things" that have wrought Together for my good.

SAVED BY OLD " CORONATION."

It was,-I do not remember the precise year,but it was when I was about seventeen years old, and when I lived in the New England village where I was born, and from which I had hardly ever been away.

It was the day before Thanksgiving, the only holiday that New England knows much about, and about which the rest of the world knows so very little. For three nights before, the cold had been very severe for that time of the year, and the newly formed ice on the pond was as smooth and clear as a looking glass. What were we all to do the next day, "the gladdest, merriest day" of the year, besides go to church and eat the feast that had been so long in preparation ? That was the question asked by my strong, earnest, older friend, who had come from Boston to spend Thanksgiving. "Skate, of course," I answered.

"But why not try the ice to-night ?" he asked. I could see no reason, and so we bound on our skates and flew as it were over the glassy surface of the pond to the cove, about which were the piles of pine boughs. Once there, we conceived the idea of how grand it would be to skate back to the village, collect together the women and girls, take suitable provisions for a pic-nic, take them all in sleighs, and on hand sleds, draw them to this place, and eat a supper on these rocks | Well, that is right; but there is more in being truamid the glare of the burning tree tops.
