

From upland, grove and lawn, Outbreaths the universal prayer, The orison of morn. Arise, and don thy walking garb, All nature is astir ; Let honest motives be thy barb, And usefulness thy spur. Stop not to list the boist'rous jeers, (He would be what thou art;) They should not e'en offend thy ears, Still less disturb thy heart. What, though you have no shining hoard, (Inheritance of stealth ;) To purchase at the broker's board, Inaction will not do:

12-27

Don't blush because you have a patch, In honest labor won; There's many a small cot roofed with thatch That's happier than a throne. Pcsh on ! the world is large enough For you and me and all : You must expect your share of rough, And now and then a fall. But up again! act well your part-Bear willingly your load ; There's nothing like a cheering heart To mend a stony road.

There's always some kind hand To lift life's wagon from the ruts, Or poke away the sand, Remember when yon sky of blue Is shadowed by a cloud, The sun will shine as soon for you As for the monarch proud. It is but written on the moon That toil alone endures: The king would dance a rigadoon With that blithe soul of yours, Inaction will not do; Take life's small bundle in your hand, And trudge it, briskly, through.

Take life's small bundle in your hand, And trudge it, briskly, through.

man, kind and generous, but yet very strict. Of course we youngsters found plenty of occasion to find fault with him, and very often were his decisions arrainged before our mess, and decidedly condemned. In fact we should have reversed many of his judgments, if we had the power; but as he was commander, and we only foremast hands and boys at that-he had his own way, and the luminous decisions we came to were constantly of no avail,

Now we boys had learned in the course of our travels to drink our grog as well as any sailors. We could toss off a glass of rum and water with as so to do, not only as a privilege but as an honor, to which a life on the ocean entitled us. But even in this respect our captain too differed from us. When we could get on shore we would invariably sober. I said "we," but there was one of our num-
