Poetry.

THE BRIGHT SIDE.

There is many a rest in the road of life,
If we only would stop to take it,
And many a tone from the better land,
If the querulons heart would wake it!
To the sunny soul that is full of hope,
And whose beautiful trust ne'er faileth,
The grass is green and the flowers are bright,
Though the wintry storm prevaileth.

Better to hope though the clouds hang low,
And to keep the eyes still lifted;
For the sweet blue sky will soon peep through
When the ominous clouds are rifted;
There was never a night without a day,
Or an evening without a morning;
And the darkest hour, as the proverb goes,
Is the hour before the dawning.

There is many a gem in the path of life,
Which we pass in our idle pleasure,
That is richer far than the jewelled crown,
Or the miser's hoarded treasure.
It may be the love of a little child,
Or a mother's prayers to heaven,
Or only a beggar's grateful thanks
For a cup of water given.

Better to weave in the web of life
A bright and golden filling,
And to do God's will with a ready heart,
And hands that are swift and willing,
Than to snap the delicate, slender threads
Of our curious lives asunder,
And then blame heaven for the tangled ends
And sit, and grieve, and wonder.

Miscellaneous.

TRUST.

Nat crawled out of his poor little bed, which hardly deserved the name of bed at all. The room was very bare and very cold. As Nat slipped on what remained of his only pair of shoes, a heavy cloud seemed to settle down upon his face. His mother, a little woman with a face pale and worn, but cheerful nevertheless, was putting a few crusts of bread with three or four cold potatoes upon a plate.

"I do say, mother," said Nat, shivering and looking about the room, "it is no sort of use, we shall have to give up. I don't see but we shall freeze to death, with no fire, and starve besides;" and Nat sat down upon the side of his bed and leaned his face upon his hand. "I can't get a bit of work to do, and there isn't a person in the world that cares a cent about us," he continued, dejectedly. "It seems as if I should not care so much if it was myself; but to see you cold and hungry, mother, is more then I can bear," and Nat burst into tears.

"Why my boy," said his mother cheerily, "don't give up so. Don't you remember that we have a Father who sees all our troubles, and if we only trust him he will help us."

"You have said that for the last three weeks, mother," said Nat; "and I have tried to trust him; but things grow worse and worse."

"'Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him,' is the trust we want to have, Nattie," said his mother, sitting down by his side and putting her arms around his neck, "We have each other left yet, and we are not really sick"—her eyes grew a little dim as she looked at Nat's pale, thin face—"and then there is that nice teacher at the mission school, you know, who thought he could do something for you."

"Yes," said Nat, wiping his eyes with the back of his hand, "but I have not seen him, and don't know as I ever shall; my clothes have got so bad now that I can't go to the school."

"Well, dear," said his mother, "we will eat what we have and be cheerful. We shall not starve to-day, and may be you may get a few pennies for sweeping, and I may find a little washing to do; at any rate we will try hard to look pleasant too, for people will be more likely to help us it we smile and look pleasant than they will if we look cross and sour."

Nat tried hard to smile and eat his share of the scanty breakfast. Bidding his mother good-by, he took his old broom and started out. He walked painfully up street after street, for his feet were covered with chilblains and his old shoes were hard and full of holes. At last he selected a crossing to sweep where he thought rich and fashionable people might cross, and patiently waited, trying to look cheerful and smiling. During the forenoon he got a few pennies; but as the afternoon wore on he felt very faint and hungry, and leaning on his broom he began to think of what his mother had said in the morning. "Though he slay me" kept ringing in his head. "Ah," he thought to himself, "I have not really trusted. When everything goes well, the trusting is easy enough; but when it comes to the 'slaying' I give in." Hearing voices near him he started, and looking up, saw the mission school teacher. Such a gleam of hope shot through his heart that it lighted up his face, and he felt as if help had come.

"Ah, Nat, how do you do?" said his teacher pleasantly, while the gentleman who was with him looked on with some surprise. "How are you getting on now?"

"Not at all," answered Nat, trying to smile.

"I'm sorry," said his teacher. "I hoped I was going to get a chance for you last week, but I lost it. Well, keep up your courage, I think we will find something yet," and the gentleman walked on.

Nat looked after them with tears all ready to come into his eyes. "Courage, with nothing to eat," he thought, leaning on his broom again; "but that is not trusting, and I mean to really trust, for there's nothing else I can do;" and shutting his eyes for a moment, he sent an earnest little prayer to the loving heavenly Father who is just as ready to hear us when we call to him from the noisy street as from the hush of the church.

"Hallo, there, youngster," said a hearty voice. "Hold my horse here, and I'll give you a quarter."

Nat dropped his broom and ran eagerly to the horse. A portly gentleman stepped with some difficulty from the carriage. Nat looked at him and smiled pleasantly.

"You think I am rather awkward, youngster," he said; "but I'm only just off the water, and your miserable land traps I can't manage."

"Oh no, sir, I did not think so at all," said Nat, looking at him wistfully for his own dear father died at sea, and there was a charm about anybody who had been on the water.

Something about the smile on Nat's wan face must have attracted the gentleman, for he turned back after he had started up the steps of the house.

"See here my boy," said he, "what were you thinking about when I drove up?"

Nat blushed faintly, and hesitated a little.

"You looked as if you were up in the sky, or somewhere else, and I had to scream at you as if you were a mile off. I should like to know what you were at."

"I was trying to trust, sir," said Nat, softly looking down.

"To what?" exclaimed the gentleman, looking at him in astonishment.

"To trust in God, sir," said Nat, looking up in his face. "Mother and I are very poor and have no friends, but she feels sure God will help us if we trust him."

Captain Reid, for the gentleman was a sea-captain, thrust his hands into his pockets and whistled a little, looking hard into Nat's face.

"What's your name?" he asked suddenly.

"Nat Raymond, sir," was the answer.

"Raymond," exclaimed the captain; "was your father's name Nathan?"

"Yes, sir," said Nat, in some surprise, "and he died at sea. Did you know him?"

"Know him," said Captain Reid. "Bless your heart, boy, he saved my life once, when we were both before the mast. Here, tumble into my carriage, and show me the way to your mother, quick!"

Nat would not have been more astonished if the sky had fallen. He glanced at the carriage and then toward his broom.

"Let your broom go to the dogs," said the captain; "you won't need it again; get in quick, and tell me where to go."

"I do so, mother," said a young lady who was looking out of the window, "Uncle Reid is the queerest man. He has been talking with the most miserable-looking boy out here, and now he has actually taken him into the carriage and gone off with him."

"He is always doing queer things," said her mother. "He is just as likely to pick up a ragged boy as the Vice-President."

Two or three hours after, Captain Reid came back to his sister's house.

"Where did you go with that ragged boy, uncle?" asked his niece.

"The boy?" said her uncle, "why, that boy's father saved my life once. He died on shipboard on his way home from Australia, more than two years ago. He was going captain next voyage. He touched at Liverpool going out, and I saw him there. He told me if I got home first to see that his wife and boy were getting on well. I have not been here since that time, till to-day, and should never have found them in the world, poor things, if that boy hadn't smiled his father's own smile into my face. He and his mother were about starved, I should say, and half frozen too. But," he added, rubbing his hands together chuckling to himself, "I guess they will be warm to-night, and if they are ever hungry again it, won't be my blame."

STICK IT ON THE MIND.

A boy, in a fit of passion, spoke God's name in vain. As soon as the words were out of his mouth he was ashamed and sorry and when he went home he asked his mother to write down all the Bible said about profane swearing. He said he "wanted to study it, and stick it on his mind, and carry it about with him everywhere." So she found and copied the following texts:

"Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain, for the Lord will not hold him guiltless who taketh his name in vain."—Exodus 20; 8.

"Ye shall not swear by my name falsely, neither shalt thou profane the name of thy God; I am the Lord.—(Lev. 19: 12.)

"Because of swearing the land mourneth; the pleasant places of the wilderness are dried up." (Jer. 28. 10.)

"I say unto you, Swear not at all; neither by heaven, for it is God's throne; nor by the earth, for it is his footstool; neither by Jerusalem, for it is the City of the great King. Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black. But let your communication be Yea, yea; Nay, nay; for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil."—(Matt. 5: 34. 37).

"Above all things, my brethren, swear not; neither by the earth; neither by any other oath; but let your yea be yea, and your nay nay; lest ye fall into condemnation." (James 5: 12.)

He learned these scriptures, and I have written them down for every boy who reads these lines to learn them also.

A BOY'S IDEA OF HEADS.—"Heads are of different shapes and sizes. They are full of notions. Large heads do not always hold the most. Some people can tell what a man is by the shape of his head. High heads are the best kind. Very knowing people are longheaded. A fellow that won't stop for anything or anybody, is called hot headed. If he isn't quite so bright, they call him softheaded. If he won't be coaxed nor turned, they call him pig-headed. Animals have very small heads. The heads of fools slant back. When your head is cut off you are beheaded. Our heads are all covered with hair, except bald heads. There are barrel heads, heads of sermons—and some ministers used to have fifteen heads to sermons; pin heads, heads of cattle, as the farmer calls his cows and oxen; head winds; drum heads; cabbage heads; at loggerheads; come to a head; heads of chapters; head him off; head of the family, and go ahead—but first be sure you are right."—Young American, Rogersville, Tenn.

A TIDY HOUSE.—As a general rule for living neatly and saving time, it is better to keep clean than to make clean. If you are careful not to drop crumbs of bread or cake on the carpet, you will escape an untidy room, and save the trouble of cleaning and working. If you make a practice of putting all the ends of your thread into a division of work-box kept for the purpose, and never let one fall on the floor, the room will look very differently at the end of the morning from what it dose when this is not attended to. A house is kept far cleaner when all the members of the family are taught to wipe their feet thoroughly on coming in from out of doors, than it can be done where this is neglected. There are a thousand ways of keeping clean and saving labor and time, which are well worth while to learn and practice, and though this may seem to entail trouble, it is not so with any one of refined feelings, who regards all labor to secure cleanliness a labor of duty and love.—Cor. Germantown Telegraph.

CHEAP DISINFECTANTS.—One pound of green copperas, costing seven cents, dissolved in one quart of water, and poured down a water closet, will effectually destroy the foulest smells. On board ships and steamboats, about hotels and other places, there is nothing so nice to purify the air. Simple green copperas dissolved under the bed in anything that will hold water will render a hospital, or other place for the sick, free from unpleasant smells. For butchers' stalls, fish markets, slaughter houses, sinks, and wherever there are offensive putrid gases, dissolve copperas and sprinkle it about and in a few days the smell will pass away. If a cat, rat or mouse dies about the house and sends forth an offensive gas, place some dissolved copperas in an open vessel near the place where the nuisance is, and it will soon purify the atmosphere.—Herald of Health.

A traveller writes from Brazil: "The milkman is a great institution in Rio de Janerio. His cart is on legs instead of wheels. The cow herself is driven round to the houses to supply the customers always accompained by a calf, sometimes a year old, muzzled and tied to her tail."

Ayer's
Cherry Pectoral,
For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Among the great discoveries of modern science, few are of more real value to mankind than this effectual remedy for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs. A vast trial of its virtues, throughout this and other countries, has shown that it does surely and effectually control them. The testimony of our best citizens, of all classes, establishes the fact, that CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organs yield to its power; and cases of Consumption, cured by this preparation, are publicly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy it is adequate, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence; and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of Childhood, CHERRY PECTORAL is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centred on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No one will suffer troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured.
Originally the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, no cost or toil is spared in making every bottle in the utmost possible perfection. It may be confidently relied upon as possessing all the virtues it has ever exhibited, and capable of producing cures as memorable as the greatest it has ever effected.

Iron in the Blood
PERUVIAN SYRUP
AN IRON TONIC
MAKES THE WEAK STRONG.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low state of the system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures, to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

ALSO NOVA SCOTIA, P. E. ISLAND AND ABROAD.
BEFORE closing the second year of our business, we desire respectfully to state that we are not unmindful of the many obligations under which we rest, for the large and very general support extended to us—a support and connection far exceeding our expectation.
In our opening Circular we stated our object was to establish "A FIRST-CLASS TRADE," and in this particular our aim and hope have been more than realized by the fact that our relations are daily extending with all sections of the Maritime Provinces, and our Foreign correspondence eminently rewarding our efforts to adhere more rigidly than ever to our Established System of Uniform Prices, which gives Strangers and Persons Ordering by Letter equal advantages with those making personal purchases.
To retain confidence in the future, as in the past, will be our aim.
To keep our Stock well up with all the Leading British and Continental NOVELTIES, we have made arrangements with First Class Houses to supply us with these, as facilities may offer; and in course of time to add other important features and attractions, so that OURS shall not only be in name, but in reality, a First Class Establishment. Your Obedient Servants,
