a sample air-pump, and a fine collection of minerals, made partly by exchanges. The natural sciences, however, did not receive exclusive attention. One of the boys commenced the study of Latin, and be- came a throrough master of the language, by copy- ing his lesson each morning on a slip of paper, and committing it thoroughly to memory during his field labors each day. He did not stop with Latin, but has since become familiar with the principal ancient and modern languages, and now, after the lapse of meny years, is one of the most eminent philologists of America. Another member of this family is now editor of a leading American agricul- tural journal. Now, in conclusion, an interesting question comes up—what gave this family such a taste for science and study, while others about them spend their lei- sure time in idle sports ? The answer is—the exam- ple of the parent. When boys see their father occu- pying all his time, thoughts, and affections in mak- ing money, they will naturally copy him at once. But if as in the case above described, the father has an enthusiastic taste for science, made it his de-	entered the navy, lived fast, and his sun went down before its noon, and went down in darkness. His agonized mother hung over him, trying to turn his closing eyes to his Saviour, but they rested upon his earthly friends; she presented the attractions of heaven, but the fading glories of earth fastened his gaze; she warned him of coming retribution, but a habit of putting off the evil day with delusive hopes of recovery lulled his sensibilities; she entrea- ted, she poured out her soul in pleading, but he had leng ago learned to disregrad his mother's wishes and feelings, and in a quiet, courteous way, he turned fom it all unmoved until the dread cur- tain fell. The mother lived to reap many fruits of her great mistake. Her children were not unkind; in- deed, they were ready to supply her wants, but they had no sympathy with her. She moved among them as a stranger. They were treading two paths leading to two ends. As. borne down by care, sorrow, and overtasking, she drew near the confines of the unseen world, her spiritual sight grew clearer, and she saw, in part, her mistake, and she saw the precipice upon which her loved ones were standing, and her last energies were directed to their spiritual welfare. But her tearful, earnest entreates came all too late. She mourned that her "house was not so with God," but she felt that her covenant with him was sure, and in penitence and love she sought the place where the weary find rest. An amiable wife and four pro- mising children made up the family group, and presented to the eye of the observer one of our at- tractive New England homes, the beautiful fruit of a high Christian civilization. The father possessed a large measure of energy and decision-he stood a tower of strength, in	and connection far exceeding our expectation. In our opening Circular we stated our object was to es- tablish "A FIRST-CLASS TRADE," and in this particu- lar our aim and hope have been more than realized by the fact that our relations are dally extending with all sec- tions of the Maritime Provinces, and our Foreign corres- pondence eminently rewarding our efforts to adhere more rigidly than ever to our Established System of Uniform Prices, which gives Strangers and Persona Ordering by Letter equal advantages with those making personal pur- chases. To retain confidence in the future, as in the past, will be our aim. Though we have not means to purchase Costly pictures, rich and rare-Though we have not silken hangings For the walls so bleak and bare, We can hang them o'er with garlands, For flowers bloom everywhere.

We can always make home cheerful, If the right course we begin, We can make its inmates happy, And their truest blessings win, It will make the small room brighter If we let the sunshine in.

We can gather round the fireside When the evening hours are long-We can bend our hearts and voices In a happy social song; We can guide some erring brother-
