A STORY FOR SABBATH-SCHOOL TEACHERS. It was genuine March weather when one Sabbath afternoon a young lady was returning home from her mission Sunday-school. It was a hard walk, and she stopped several times to rest. She had been teeling unwell for a considerable time, and it seemed to her now as if the fatiguing effort of this last hour had exhausted all her remaining strength.

"No," she said to herself ; " it must not go any further. That boy is so nanghty and so indifferent, must not come next Sabbath."

With difficulty the young lady had reached the wafted to her ear and awakened a train of thought in her heart.

"Alas," she said, " how long have I been trying to lead these lambs to the good Shepherd, but where, where is the fruit? Perhaps it is my own fault, for Jesus, has said 'Ask and ye shall receive : and although I daily lay upon his faithful heart the children he has committed to me, it may be that I have not done it in faith as I ought. But oh, such a boy as this Seth Rogers takes all my courage."

As she continued her walk the young lady came up to the flock. As she drew near, she heard the distressed cry of a lamb that had fallen in the water and could not get out. Happily the shephera's boy came just in season to rescue it. The lamb struggled long against the hand that would save it; but the shepherd's boy said, " No, no, I shan't give you up !" and at last he drew the lamb safe ashore. "There now," said the young lady, who had come to the spot,-" you are richly rewarded for your pains." "Yes, indeed ; but I could not let it down ; for I shall have to give account of every one of them to my master," replied the boy, The words went to the heart of the young lady. "No," she said to herself, "I will not give up a single one of the little ones committed to me. I will keep trying, I will keep praying, and I will have more faith in Jesus, my Saviour."

and everybody said, 'It will prove to be a most excellent pear.' It began to look very beautiful; t was full and round, and of a rich, red glow. "'Is it not almost ripe? I long for a bite," I cried, as I followed father one day down the alley to the pear-tree. ' Wait patiently, my child ; it will not be fully ripe for a week,' said my father. I thought I loved pears better than anything else; often I used to stop and look longingly up to this.

The longer I stopped alone under the pear-tree, the greater my longing for it, until I was seized with the thought of getting it.

"One night, after we were in bed, my brothers ell asleep long before I did; I tossed about and ould not get any rest. I crept up, and went to the window. It was a warm, still summer night, and there was no moon. My father and mother were gone away. I put my head out of the window, and peeped into the garden. I glanced in the just what you say. RULES FOR HOME EDUCATION .- From your children's earliest infancy inculcate the necessity of instant obedience. Unite firmness with gentleness. Let your children understand that you mean unless you are quite sure you can give them what you promise. If you tell a little child to do something, show him how to do it, and see that it is done. Always correct your children for wilfully disobeying you, but never correct them in anger. Never show your children that they can vex you, or
