2. A thorough acquaintance with the Bible was manifested in all Mr. Moody's addresses. The disquisitions, no sermons of the high and dry style, with introduction, three divisions, and two applications, nor was there a retailing of other men's wares, culled from pages of periodicals which print the sermons of celebrated preachers. But there always were a clear secting forth of the truth, and warm, loving, hearty appeals to saint and sinner. What power there is in union! Ministers of all denominations have united in this work. It has been begun and continued without one sectarian or other jar. All have been of one mind. One purpose has ever been kept in view—the extension No envy of a brother minister's talent, acquireof Christ's kingdom among men. Is it too much to hope that this spirit of union will continue? that Christians will continue to meet and act together for Christian purposes, leaving political and ecclesiastical questions to be taken up as individuals may deem right, and that without bitterness, but in love?

4. Much of the success has resulted from Mr. Sankey's singing. Every word told, and the meaning and sentiment of the hymns were given with marvellous power. His hymns have driven other songs from our streets, and "Safe in the arms of Jesus," " Dare to be a Daniel," &c., have become the most popular songs of the day. Songs take and tell with those whom sermons cannot reach. Much of the rudeness, coarseness, and impurity which exists amongst the lower classes is engendered and fostered by the songs most popular with them. Is there no undeveloped power of song in our churches that could be utilized in singing the gospel? Evangelistic services, in which singing should be of Christ, Would that all words of misrepresen-

would be certain to be numerously attended. 5. Messrs. Moody and Sankey have a work to do, and they do it. They allow nothing to divert them from it. They bend all their energies to its welldoing. 6. Prayer has been a chief element in these efforts. Mr. Moody evidently believes in hard work; but he also believes in earnest, united, faithful prayer. Pray and work, work and pray, should be the inspiring motto of all.
