PROHIBITORY LIQUOR LAW AGITATION.

NO. III. The fourth question to which the Commissioners sought an answer was-What have been the effects upon the social and moral condition of the people? To us this seems the question of paramount im portance. It is argued that the liquor traffic is a source of so large revenue that the country cannot afford to prohibit it. "Cannot afford," indeed ! the country; it has also been shown that it entails an immense cost for the suppression of punishment of crime engendered by it, and for the support of tory law cannot be executed the same report well the poor who would not be poor but for it; and says-"To admit, for a single moment, that the now if it can be shown that where prohibition has State cannot execute its laws would be a confession been bonestly tried the social and moral condition of weakness unworthy of a great and powerful of the people has been improved, what further need commonwealth, and would be a pusilianimon be said in favor of such prohibition? The revenue surrender of the authority of government to the arising from the traffic is consumed, and more, in power of the vicious and lawless; and to strike a the support of institutions made necessary by it : law from the Statute Book on such a plea would and then there are those lamentable and heart deprive the remaining Statutes of all dignity, and rending things directly and unmistakably resulting of moral force; they would only remain as a monufrom it, which cannot be estimated in dollars and ment of weakness of government, and the indulcents—the lives wrecked and blasted, the happy gence of the criminal classes who should forbear homes darkened and destroyed, the widows and to demand their repeal. orphans made, the hearts broken and the souls lost. If there should be an actual loss of revenue (which we do not believe), is that a thing to be seriously considered in view of the results of the traffic to which we have alluded-results which every Sunday, from 5 to 6 o'clock, P. The Prohibitory Laws have been earnestly endered and continue to the service. They must be sharply felt by the law to any degree, that will be sharply felt by the law to any degree, the law to any degree, that will be sharply felt by the law to any degree, the law to any degree, the law to any degree and where Prohibitory Laws have been earnestly enforced the effect has been to raise the standard of

Against the plea that it is an interference with the rights of dealers in liquors, and also of those who are disposed to drink, it is properly and forcibly arged that society has a right to protect itself against every trade and practice that is evil; and there is scarcely any one who will pretend to deny that the sale and use of intoxicating liquors are evil and evil only. The Report of Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Representatives of Massachusetts who, in considering a petition for the repeal of the Prohibitory Law and the substitution of a license system, went carefully over the whole question, deals very fully and forcibly with the Nation) that an attempt is to be made to re-
