Toward home the storm-tossed mariner Speeds swiftly with the favoring gale With joy he hails his native shore; Anchored, he furls his wind-worn sail. Again he treads his own bright strand,

And leaves behind the ocean's foam, The waves that sweep at God's command, And greets the waiting ones at home. Toward home the war-worn soldier hastes,

From fields where strife's proud symbols glow When battle's storm no longer wastes, And war's red tide has ceased to flow ; For home, for country and for God

He dares the strite on blood-red fields. Again he treads home's hallowed sod, And finds the peace its altar yields. Toward home the wanderer takes his way, After the flight of swift-winged years;

With rapture sees his own blue bay; And bright his native clime appears; The skies, the hills, the domes, the spires, That blest the land that first he knew,

With sudden joy his bosom fires; Homeward he speeds to pleasures true. Toward home, when evening shades of life

Are round his way, earth's pilgrim goes-Beyond the pain, the dying strife, Where the eternal morning glows; A moment tossed on death's dark sea,

Then bursts on faith's uplifted eve Land where the many mansions be-The spirit's home, where none shall die.

THE DEMIJOHNS.

The following story taken from a Temperance tract published at 58 Reade St., N. Y., illustrates the importance of early training. Parents hardly realize how their thoughtless influence may operate upon their children to their ruin before they are aware of it. They may imagine that habits of fashionable wine drinking can do no harm, but they are woefully mistaken. The story will speak for itself: "Who's that, I wonder?" said Mrs. Seaburn, as she heard a ring at the basement door. "Ah ! it's Marshall," returned her husband, who had looked out at the window, and recognized the grocer's cart. "And what have you had sent home now, Henry ?"

But before Mr. Seaburn could answer, the door of the sitting room was opened, and one of the domestics looked in, and asked.

"What'll I do wid the demijohns, mum?" Demijohns?" repeated Mrs. Seaburn.

"Put them in the hall, and I'll attend to them," interposed the husband.

"Henry, what have you sent home now?" the wife asked after the domestic was gone. "Some nice old brandy," replied Henry. Cora Seaburn glanced up at the clock, and then down upon the floor. There was a cloud upon her fair brow, and it was very evident that something lay heavily upon her heart. Presently she walked to the wall and pulled the bell-cord, and the summons was answered by the chambermaid. "Are George and Charles in their room?" "Yes ma'am."

"Tell them it is school-time."

The girl went out, and in a little while two boys entered the sitting-room with their books under their arms and their caps in their hands. They were bright, happy, healthy fellows, with goodsparkling eyes. George was thirteen years of age, and Charles eleven; and certainly those two parents had reason to be proud of them. The boys kissed their mother, gave a happy "good-morning" to their father, and then went away to school. "Cora," said Mr. Seaburn, some time after the boys had gone, "what makes you so sober?" "Sober !" repeated the wife, looking up. "Yes. You have been sober and mute ever since the grocer came." "Do you want me to tell you why?" " Of course I do."

"Well, Henry, I am sorry you have had that spirit brought into the house."

"Pooh! what's the use in talking so, Cora? You wouldn't have me do without it, would you?" " Yes."

"Why, what do you mear ?" "I mean that I would cut clear of the stuff, now and forever."

"But, Cora, you are wild. What should we do at our parties without wine?" " Do as others who have it not." "But what would people say? Are you afraid

I-but no, I won't ask so foolish a question." "Ask it, Henry. Let us speak plainly, now that we have fairly commenced." "Well, I was about to ask if you were afraid that I should ever drink too much ?" "That's not a fair question, Henry. I was not thinking of that at all. But I will answer it byand-by. You have no fixed appetite for it now." "Of course not." "Then it would not cost any effort of will to abstain from its use?" " Not a particle."

"And you only have it in the house, and serve it to your friends and drink it yourself, because it is fashionable; or you do it because others do "I do it because-" said Mr. Seaburn, hesitating in his choice of language—" because it would appear very odd, and very niggardly, and very fanatical not to do it." This last was spoken emphatically. "But," pursued Mrs. Seaburn with the calmness and assurance of one who feels the sustaining influence of right, "you would not do what you were convinced was wrong out of respect to any such considerations, would you?" "You know I would not, Cora. This question of temperance, I know, is a good one in the abstract, and I am willing to live up to it as I understand it; but I am no teetotaler." "Henry, said his wife, with an earnest look into his face, "will you answer me a few questions, and answer them honestly and truly, without equivocation or evasion?"

EATON'S ACTUAL BUSINESS COMMERCIAL COLLEGE. Ritchie's Building, St. John, N. B.

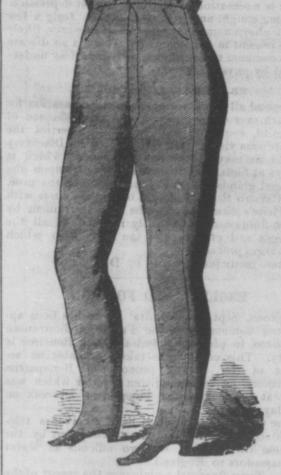

THE COLLEGE is designed to educate young men for the various pursuits of life, by means of a complete system of ACTUAL BUSINESS Training. The course of study is comprehensively effective and interesting, and adapted not only to such as have enjoyed the best educational advantages, but also to those whose education is defective from want or neglect of early opportunities. Every young man, no matter whether he intends to be a MERCHANT, BANKER, FARMER, MECHANIC, to enter one of the learned professions, should have a good knowledge of business forms and usages, be well quainted with the uses of commercial paper, and the ws which govern trade, and possess a clear and compr ensive knowledge of bookkeeping, which will enable him, in after years, so to arrange and classify his transac-tious as to be able to grasp, with equal ease, the minutest detail and the exact result of the most extensive opera-ST. JOHN, N. B lons. If such knowledge were general, not to say universal, it would not only promote economy and thrift, by lessen anxiety and litigation, and largely increase the comfor, happiness, and enjoyment of life.

W E have already drawn attention to the annual meeting of the Society of Arts, held on the 23rd current, under the presidentship of M. Th. de Saussure, and are now able to furnish some further details. Professor Soret, in delivering a most interesting report, passed in review the operations of the Industrial section, in reference to Commerce, laying great stress upon the competition that has taken place in the manufacture of the competition that has taken place in the manufacture of the competition of the competit chronometers. This competition was instituted with the object of testing the workmanship and precision of chrometers turned out by Genevese manufacturers, and none but those adopted for pocket use were were deposited in charge of the authorities at the Observatory, and underwent the most searching ordeal possible to be applied to pocket instruments of this class. The jury specially retained to decide the difficult question as to whom to award the palm of excellence unanimously decided in favor of Messrs. J. M. Badollet & Co. This firm having carried off the sole prize by exhibiting a chronometer which fulfilled in the highest degree every connometer which lition required, crowned their first success by gaining honorable mention for two other chronometers. The al A Large stock READY MADE CLOTHING lusion to this triple honor was received with enthusiastic applause, and Professor Humbert, President of the Fine Arts Section closed the meeting with happy and humorous ssertation upon subjects connected with this department, An assortment of GOLD AND SILVER WATCHES, or lifferent grades, from the eminent manufacturers above referred to, always kept in stock by
