After considering the discussion Mr. Burns said it was in order he would move an amendment, as follows: "Provided that the mortgage shall be exempt in respect of his indebtedness to the extent that his personal property may fall short of his personal property." In this way you would not exempt any more than you would in the case of any mortgage. Mr. Burns then moved an amendment to exempt any more than you would in the case of any mortgage. He thought it was a very large exemption, and he thought it was a very large exemption.

Hon. Mr. Stevenson moved to substitute for the section "Mechanical tools belonging to mechanics and necessary for carrying on their business; implements of the farmer, and fishermen's nets to the extent of $200." He said he had no reason why more consideration should be given to the farmer than to the fisherman. The employment of the fisherman was more hazardous than that of the farmer. He thought it was a very large exemption, and he thought it was a very large exemption.
