- COMPLIMENTED. -In a speech delivered at the banquet given in honor of himself and Lord Salisbury on their return from the Berlin Congress, Lord Beaconsfield drew a hopeful picture of the good likely to result from the Congress. He said it was proper to expect reforms in the administration of Turkish affairs, and he cited a statement sent to the emperor of Germany by American missionaries, setting forth the toleration enjoyed by Christians, and the progress of education in the Ottoman dominions since the Crimean war. He complimented the missionaries by saying their testimony was perferable to any official report. It was that of men of the highest principles and of sublime character, who devoted their lives to benefit their fellow-creatures. This is a fine compliment to the labors of our missionaries in Armenia,

- RUSSIAN TOLERATION. - Dr. Hamlin ought to know of what he speaks when he deals with Turkish and Russian matters, for he has had experience. Referring to the toleration which it is claimed by some is exercised by Russia, he says: While Russia has made astonishing advances as a great military despotism, she has not taken the first step but the pastor can fill, while to leave it vacant is to voter must be disposed of and retire from the polla subject that should be better understood. I am ability to carry burdens. well aware that Russia boasts of absolute toleration You will never meet a Russian officer or diplomat who will not tell you that Russia is more tolerant than the United States even, because she has more religions to tolerate even pagans and Moslems. There is a slight drawback upon the perfection of the toleration in the fact that no sect is allowed to make any proselyte, not even from a pagan or a Moslem community. BE NATURAL.—The manner of ministers in the pulpit gets no little criticism. The styles of address, gesticulation &c., are many, and the tastes of hearers being quite as varied, none escape criticism. One is too noisy another does not move at all; and so the criticisms go. No preacher pleases every class of hearers, and every preacher pleases somebody. In a recent number of the S. S. Times, Rev. Mr. Miller vigorously criticized certain pulpit habits, especially that of walking from side to side of the platform while speaking; on which criticism our contemporary comments thus. If a preacher endeavors to attract attention by his walk rather than by his talk, he is not likely to arouse any great interest in either. But on the other hand, some speakers are so mastered by earnest zeal that they can no more stand still in one place than they can keep their mouth are to be found isolated in all quarters of Paris; shut. To speak at all is to enlist the help of every so far resembling the male nightingale, whose nerve and fibre in the body. Certainly it is no matter of regret that the impregnable fortification which used to be called a pulpit has fallen away before the demands of a more earnest and more personal method of preaching.
