LICENSE LAW.

"For so much gold we license thee." So say our laws-" a draught to sell, That bows the strong, enslaves the free, And opens wide the gates of hell. For public good requires that some, Since many die, should live by rum.'

Ye civic fathers ! while the foes Of this destroyer seize their swords, And heaven's own hail is in the blows They're dealing-will ye cut the cords That round the falling fiend they draw, And o'er him hold your shield of law ?

And will ye give to man a bill Divorcing him from heaven's high sway, And while God says, "Thou shalt not kill," Say ye. "For gold ye may-ye may ?" Compare the body with the soul : Compare the bullet with the bowl !

In which is felt the fiercer blast. Of the destroying angel's breath ? Which binds its victim the more fast? Which kills him with the deadlier death ? Will ye the felon fox restrain, And yet take off the tiger's chain ?

The God-contemning Tuscan tied, Till by the way, or on his bed, The poor corpse-carrier drooped and died-Lashed hand to hand, and face to face, In fatal and in loathed embrace.

Less cutting, think ye, is the thong That to a breathing corpse, for life, Lashed in torture loathed and long. The drunkard's child-the drunkard's wife ? To clasp that clay-to breathe that breath, And no escape !---oh, that is death !

Are ye not fathers ? When your sons Look on you for their daily bread, Dare ye, in mockery, load with stones The table that for them ye spread ? How can you hope your sons will live, If ye for fish a serpent give ?

O holy God ! let light divine Break forth more broadly from above. Till we conform our laws to thine-The perfect law of truth and love. For truth and love alone can save Thy children from a hopeless grave. --- Rev. John Pierpoint.

Most women have a dread of them. Mothers would rather their little daughters were called any- floor. thing else than romps. They say to them, "Be very quiet now, my dears ; don't run or jump, and be little ladies." As if a healthy child could be still ; as if it could take time to walk, or step over what came in its way ; as if it could fold its hands in its lap, when its little heart is so brimful of tickle. It is absurd and wrong, because it is unnatural. Children, girls as well as boys, need exercise ; indeed, they must have it, to be kept in a healthy fresh wounds. Indeed, we don't believe there is a prettier picture in all the wide world than that of a little girl balancing herself on the topmost rail of an old zigzag fence, her bonnet on one arm and a basket of black-berries on the other, her curls streaming out in the wind, or rippling over her flushed cheeks, her apron half torn from her waist, and dangling to herfeet, her fingers stained with the berries she had picked, and her lips with those she had eaten. Mother, mother, don't scold that little creature when she comes and puts her basket on the table, and looks ruefully at the rent in the new gingham apron, and at the little bars toes sticking out of the last pair of shoes. Wash off her hot face and soiled hands, and give her a bowl of cool milk and light bread, and when she has eaten her fill and got rested, make her sit down beside you and tell what she has seen, off in those meadows and woods. Her heart will be full of beautiful things-the sound of the wind, the fall of the leaves, the music of the wild birds and the laugh of wild flowers, the rippling of streams and the color of pebbles, the shade of the clouds and the hue of the sunbeamsall those will have woven their spell over her inno-

Why should you dread to-morrow, And thus despoil our day ? For when you borrow trouble, You always have to pay. It is a good old maxim. Which should be often preached-Don't cross the bridge before you Until the bridge is reached.

You might be spared much sighing, If you would keep in mind The thought that good and evil Are always here combined. There must be something wanting, And though you roll in wealth, You may miss from your casket That precious jewel-health.

And though you're strong and sturdy, You may have an empty purse ; (And earth has many trials Which I consider worse !) But whether joy or sorrow Fill up your mortal span, 'Twill make your pathway brighter To smile whene'er you can.

SAD RESULT OF "DIME NOVELS." BY MRS. MARY D. KELSEY.

It was a bright summer morning during the dark or on the sheltered side of a haystack, and often days of the rebellion, that Robert Goode, with the met with strange companions. He lived chiefly on morning paper in his hand, rushed into his young bread and water, with occasionally a draught of wife's room : "Lida, dear, there is another call for milk as a luxury. more men, and I must now go, for our country needs every man to do his duty. With closed eyes, he held his child long and lovingly-then, as if just waking from a dream, he said : "Before I am too weak to talk I want you to promise me, dear, that you will train our darling boy for a life of usefulness, He is the pledge of love, that God has given us, and, as my earthly course has about terminated, it will rest on you to train this precious gift alone. STUDIOUS BOY.

About the year 1596 a poor lad of seventeen was seen traveling on foot in the south of England. He carried over his shoulder at the end of a stick, all the clothing he had in the world, and had in his pocket an old purse with a few pieces of money given him by his mother, when, with a throbbing, prayerful heart, she took her leave of him on the road, a short distance from their own cottage. And who was John ? for that was his name. He was the son of poor but honest and pious people, and had six brothers and five sisters, all of whom Moneton. had to labor hard for a living. He was a goodly lad, and at fourteen was disappointed in getting a place as parish clerk, and with his parents' consert set out to get employment.

At the city of Exeter, where he first went, he met with no success ; but as he looked on the beauti-Millstream. ful cathedral, and in the bookseller's window, a strong desire sprung up in his mind to become a scholar, and at once he set out for the University of Oxford, some two hundred miles off, walking the Long Reach. whole way. no waking, until that great day when all the dead shall rise.

Neither Lida nor Robert had parents living ; but she accepted the invitation of a near relative to take little Robbie and make their home with them. These friends were gay, and, after a time, Lida became interested in their gayeties, and forgot her sorrow, and neglected her promise, and little Robbie's training was left to servants.

Robbie grew to be a handsome, bright, but very wilful boy ; doing as he pleased-having no regard would steal it, buy his favorite food, hide away If the inaccurate scholar's difficulties closed with K., and puzzles first-rate.
