tion of the bill. The present arrangement has been found to work satisfactorily in some cases. It has the protection of certain birds and animals. Mr. been proposed to appoint a judge to attend to the Barberie explained that the bill was to protect upon the Supreme Court judges are very onerous. The present delay is only attributable to the accumulation of business. There are now 77 causes cases awaiting judgment. The judges whom he had consulted were favorable to the bill which is to provide for an additional judge, which will make six judges from the Supreme Court, one of which will be a judge in equity. Mr. Blair was decidedly opposed to the principle embodied in the bill, which was injurious and improper. The great object appeared to be to make an addition to the Bench rather than to facilitate business before the court. He opposed the appointment of an additional judge, which must necessarly lead to additional expenses.
