Poetry.

IF WE KNEW. If we knew the woe and heartache Waiting for us down the road,-

If our lips could taste the wormwood And our backs could feel the load, Would we waste the day in wishing For a time that ne'er can be; Would we wail with such impatience For our ships to come from sea?

If we knew the baby fingers Pressed against the window pane, Would be cold and stiff to-morrow, And ne'er trouble us again, Would the bright eyes of our darling

Catch the frown upon our brow; Would the print of little fingers Vex us then as they do now? Strange, we never prize the music

Till the sweet-voic'd bird has flown; Strange, that we should slight the violets 'Till the lovely flowers are gone; Strange, that summer skies and sunshine Never seem one half so fair As when winter's snowy pinions

Shake their white down in the air. Lips from which the seal of silence None but God can roll away, Never blossomed in such beauty As adorns the mouth to-day; And sweet words that freight our mem'ry With their beautiful perfume,

Come to us in sweeter accents Through the portals of the tomb. Let us gather up the sunbeams Lying all around our path; Let us keep the wheat and roses, Casting out the thorns and chaff ; Let us find our sweetest comfort In the blessings of to-day, With a patient hand removing

All the briers from our way.

FAITHFUL IN THAT WHICH IS LEAST.

BY LUCRETIA SMITH. I watched the Master's reapers Across the distant plain, And prayed that I might gather With them the golden grain. Beside me lay my garden,

The Master's gift, I own, Yet wasted and forgotten, With weeds all overgrown. While near it bloomed my neighbor's,

Well filled with plant and vine; Twas just a little corner, Not half so large as mine. But when I looked at Autumn This tiny plat of ground Had widened into harvests With ripening glory crowned.

The Fireside.

Mr. Lesseps's place was beautiful and elaborate, for he had owned it a long time, but ours was still in the rough, and there remained a great deal to be done in every part of it, ploughing, grading, planting and what not. And then he proceeded to tell us in his own fashien, which I will translate for brevitys sake, that if we possessed our souls in patience till there came a good drenching rain to wet the soil down to a great depth, the dock roots would pull nearly as easy as turnips, and could pile them so to speak, Pelion upon Ossa.

There is no need to say how often, after this, our gaze was directed toward the heavens, nor how suddenly we became interested in the weather article in father's Tribune. Father would sometimes ask, "Well, boys, how about those weeds? When shall I bring out the five dollars?" And we would merely look at each other with a smile which we understood well enough, but which to him meant our enlightenment as to the staying power of the common dock.

At last there appeared ominous lines in Prof. Probabilities' diagram. Came a day when winds and gusts and gathering gloom darkened and deepened; and then a storm broke over the earth such as people tremble to see. We were not selfish enough to be glad, either, when we heard of all the ruin and death the tempest was bringing on the sea and land. The rain fell in sheets; the streets ran torrents; the winds roared and raged. When at last the storm ceased and the sun appeared once more nature scarcely seemed rejoicing, but exhausted, drooping, broken, as if its strength were gone and it had no heart left.

But although we had been half frightened at the fury of the tempest, and wholly sorry at its violence, there had been space enough for us to remember our own especial enterprise. We had gone out the first few hours after the rain set in, and essayed a sturdy dock. It seemed just as firm as the first one which had defied all our effort. THE TELEGRAPH.

THE Daily and Weekly Telegraph Newspapers are the most widely circulated journals in the Maritime Provinces, and are popular ADVERTISING MEDIUMS.

The Daily Telegraph is published at $6 a year, postage paid. Ministers, Postmasters, and Teachers in the Public Schools are supplied with the Daily Telegraph at $4 a year. For One Dollar it will be sent to any of those parties for the remainder of 1879.

The Weekly Telegraph is published at $1 a year. Both papers publish weekly the sermons of Dr. Talmage or some other prominent clergyman. The Telegraph gives commerce, and general news, secular and religious. It has long been noted for its ship news, and for the attendocal industries. The Family Circle is not neglected in the Telegraph, which furnishes tales, sketches, etc.
