Poetry. SOMEBODY'S MOTHER.

The woman was old, and ragged, and gray, And bent with the chill of the winter's day ;

The street was wet with a recent snow, And the woman's feet were aged and slow.

She stood at the crossing and waited long, Alone, uncared for, amid the throng

Of human beings who passed her by, Nor heeded the glance of her anxious eye.

Down the street, with laughter and shout, Glad in the freedom of school let out, Came the boys like a flock of sheep, Hailing the snow piled white and deep.

Past the woman so old and grey, Hastened the children on their way,

Nor offered a helping hand to her, So meek, so timid, afraid to stir,

Lest the carriage-wheels or the horses' feet Should crowd her down in the slippery street.

At last came one of the merry troop-The gayest laddie of all the group ;

He paused beside her, and whispered low, "I'll help you across if you wish to go."

Her aged hand on his strong, young arm She placed, and so, without hurt or harm,

He guided her trembling feet along, Proud that his own were firm and strong.

Then back again to his friends he went. His young heart happy and well content.

"She's somebody's mother, boys, you know, For all she's old, and poor, and slow ;

And I hope some fellow will lend a hand To help my mother, you understand,

If ever so poor, and old, and grey, When her own dear boy is far away."

And "somebody's mother" bowed low her head In her home that night, and the prayer she said Was-"God be kind to the noble boy

Who is somebody's son, and pride, and joy !"

PAY AS YOU GO.

The twilight was fast fading in the young student's room as he picked up his hat and swung his coat about his shoulders, in a very fascinating brigand style. Then he took out his memorandum book, and with knitted brow, puzzled over its scribbled pages. "Let's see ; I ewe Johnston fifty cents and Evans a dollar and a half.
