THE BABY'S PICTURE. We must carry our beautiful baby to town, Some day, when the weather is fair," we said "We must dress him up in his prettiest gown, And wave his hair on the top of his head;

For all his cousins, and all his aunts, And both his grandmothers proud and dear, Declare it is shameful and every way blameful To have had no picture of him this year."

He was three months old, when we took him before, And he lay like a lamb on his mamma's lap, And the darling now has a twelvemonth more Of bewildering graces from sock to cap. Just look at his dear little laughing face, At the rosebud mouth, at the violet eyes-

Why, the photograph-taker, that vanity shaker, Will think this time, we have brought him a prize

We carried our child to the town one day, The skies were soft, and the air was cool, We robed him richly in fine array-Ribbons and laces, and Swiss, and tulle He looked like a prince in the artist's chair, Sitting erect, and brave, and grand,

With a big red apple, he scarce could grapple, Held close in the palm of one dimpled hand. "He is taking it now!" We held our breath We furtively peeped from behind the screen "What a pose!" we whispered, then still as death

Waited-and baby was all serene Till the critical moment, when behold, The sun was catching that lovely look, Such a terrible roar it shook the floor! And that was the picture the swift sun took

A wrinkled face, and close shut eyes, And a mouth that's opened so very wide, That our dear little sister sibyl-wise, Declares she can see the cry inside. Aunts and cousins and grandmothers dear,

Haven't got over their anger yet; But we thought it was funny, and paid our money For that strange phase of our precious pet. Ah! children, older than baby, think, Dear little children blithe and sweet,

With your curls of gold, and your cheeks of pink And your naughty tempers sudden and fleet-What an awful thing it would be for you If an artist should happen along some day, And observing the pouting, the frown, or th flouting,

Should take a picture of you, that way! -Margaret E. Sangster in November Wide Awake.

"I did what I could, you may be sure," was the quiet answer. "And I was very careful to try and make her feel that her father's intemperance could by no possibility disgrace her. That afternoon Deacon Goodrich's family went into the woods for a pic-nic. It was a lovely day in midsummer. All nature seemed to rejoice, and Luey with a number of young friends, was full of the spirit of pleasure. Lucy would have invited Bessie had she not known it was impossible for her to accept the invitation; but the conversation of the morning had made a deep impression upon her just as her wise father had determined it should. Lucy would not be apt to speak of "disgrace" again in the connection in which she had used in this long-to-be-remembered interview.

The sun was going down behind the trees in the grand old woods. Tea was over, and the baskets had all been packed. The twilight would be a long one, and Deacon Goodrich proposed that they should enjoy the very last bit of daylight before starting for home.

"I wonder who it can be over there in the meadow beyond the stone wall ?" Lucy had asked from . the swing. "They have been there ever since we came. I have seen them lots of times. It looks, papa, as if there was a man sick over there." The that she did not notice their approach.

A FAMOUS HORSE.

We sometimes hear of, or see in print, a horse spoken as Bucephalus. Children learn from their school-books about the first of that name, belong ing to Alexander, previous to his being called Alexander the Great; whose father, King Philip, was ruler of Macedonia 335 years before the time of Christ. This little sketch from the School Journal is worth remembering, as showing how a boy won by kindness a horse that men could not conquer by

> RESURRECTION HOPE. FROM THE GAELIC OF BUCHANAN.

In thy silent dwelling sleeping; Brother ! rest in Jesus' keeping, Till the voice of the archangel Shall thy peaceful slumbers break; Then released from earth's pollution, Safe from change and dissolution, From thy sleep in joy and wonder Pure and deathless shalt thou wake.

God shall order thy adorning Like the radiant sun of morning, As he rises fair and cloudless From the mountain's dusky brow, And these orbs so marred and sightless

He shall dower with vision nightless, Till like stars of heaven forever In thy head they burn and glow. To thine ear shall then be given Power to hear the praise of heaven

Till thy being thrill responsive To the songs the blessed sing, And thy voice for praise eternal Be endowed with grace supernal, Clear and loud to raise the anthem In the temple of the King

Then as Christ in power descending, All the pomp of heaven attending, Comes His faithful ones to gather To His home of love and light. Thou from earth in joy upspringing, To His throne Thy glad way winging, Swift shalt fly as flies the eagle Joyous in his sunward flight.

From His lips in music sounding, There, with angel hosts surrounding Gladdest welcome shall He give thee, To His heart and His abode : There unsullied and immortal,

Nevermore to leave its portal, Endless life thou shalt inherit In the fellowship of God. -C. Innes Cameron.
