Wars are expensive things. The Secretary of the U. S. Treasury has just furnished a statement of the actual cost in dollars and cents of the war of the rebellion. The little bill amounts to something over six billions of dollars. Then there are the lives and the desolated hearts and homes that can not be estimated in cash. Who does not wish for the time when wars shall be no more ?

That the temperance party in Great Britain made great gains in the recent elections has been clearly shown by the vote just taken in the Commons on Sir Wilfred Lawson's Local Option Resolutions. The Resolutions affirm the right of the inhabitants of any district to determine whether they will have the licensed liquor traffic or not. This is the very principle embodied in our Temperance Act. The Resolutions passed the House by a good majority. It is now expected that a Bill, based on the Resolutions will be introduced, and it certainly ought to carry.
