THE MINGLED CUP OF LIFE. BY JORL SWARTZ, D. D.

I've found the troubles of my life Have never come alone; The fires I combat in the strife Come never one by one.

I've tound whenever one dark thread Across life's tapis flew, A quick-repeating shuttle spread A belt of kindred hue.

Perhaps some secret, subtle laws, Transcending all we know, Or some eternal, primal cause, Ordains it must be so.

I only know, when from the skies A beating torrent sweeps, The angry floods around me rise, And roll in billowy heaps.

I know when wintry skies grow pale, And bites the northern cold, That summer fruits and flowers must fail From garden, field and wold.

So, too, when splendor lights my home, I know my friends are gay; I also know when troubles come That many fall away.

I know when Honor calls her sons To offices of state, That War with drums and shotted guns Proclaims them wise and great.

I also know the shouting crowd, If fickle fortune turn, Will heap on them its curses loud. And in fierce wrath will burn.

The plague which smote the man of Uz Like linked thunder came : And trouble is what then it was: And shall be still the same.

But if the troubles of our life Come never one by one, And if the struggle and the strife Are never found alone ;

So, too, the sunshine and the joy Not less together go Than plagues and sorrows which armoy, And thwart and grieve us so.

The level sun through golden bars Sees on the cloud his how, And midnight with her myriad stars Sets all the skies aglow.

And so for me when sorrows shroud The darkened way I go, Hope often sets upon the cloud

A duplicated bow. And so for me when blinding tears Shut out the common light, Then often to my faith appears A sky supremely bright

A RUSTIC VIEW OF RUBINSTEIN.

Well, sir, he had the biggest, catty-cornedst pi anner you ever laid eyes on; somethin' like a distracted billiard table on three legs. The lid was hoisted and mighty well it was. If it had'nt been he'd a tore the entire insides clean out, and scattered 'em to the four winds of heaven.

Played well? You bet he did; but don't inter rupt me. When he first sit down, he 'peared to keer mighty little 'bout playin', and wisht he hadn't come. He tweedle-leed'ed a little on the treble, and twoodle-oodled some on the base-just fooling and boxin' the thing's jaws for bein' in his way. And I says to a man settin' next to me, says I "What sort of fool playin' is that?" And he says, "Heish!" But presently his hands commenced chasin' one another up and down over the keys like a parcel of rats scamperin' through a garret very swift. Parts of it was sweet, though, and reminded me of a sugar squirrel turnin' the wheel in a candy

"Now," I says to my neighbor, "he's showin off. He thinks he's a-doing of it, but he ain't got no idee, no plan of nothin'. If he'd play me a tune of some kind or other I'd-" But my neighbor says "Heish!" very impatient

I was just about to git up and go home, bein' tired of that foolishness, when I heard a little bird waking up away off in the woods, and call sleepylike to his mate, and I looked up and see that Ruby was beginning to take some interest in his business, and I sit down again. It was the peep of day. The light came faint from the east, the breezes blowed gentle and fresh, some more birds waked up in the orchard, then some more in the trees near the house, and all begun singin' together. People began to stir and the gal opened the shutters. Just then the first beam of the sun fairly blazed, the birds sung like they'd split their little throats; all the leaves was movin', and flashin' diamonds of dew, and the whole wide world was bright and happy as a king. Seemed to me like there was a good breakfast in every house in the land, and not a sick child or woman anywhere. It was a fine mornin.

And I says to my neighbor: "That's music, that

Then the sun went down, it got dark, the wind mouned and wept like a lost child for its dead mother, and I could a-got up then and there and preached a better sermon than any I ever listened to. There wasn't a thing in the world left to live for, not a thing, and yet I didn't want the music to stop one bit. It was happier to be miserable than to be happy without bein' miserable. I couldn't understand it. I hung my head and pulled out my handkerchief, and blowed my nose loud to keep me from cryin'. My eyes is weak anyway; I didn't want anybody to be gazin' at me a-snivlin', and it's nobodys business what I do with my nose. It's mine. But some several glared at me. Then, all of a sudden, old Rubin changed his tune. He ripped out and he rared, he tipped and he tared, he pranced and he charged. 'Peared to me that all the gas in the house was turned on at once, things got so bright, and I hilt up my head, ready to look any man in the face, and not afraid of without hearing, and see without eyes," said Miss nothin'. HOW TOM SIGNED THE PLEDGE. BY DR. H. S. RANKINE.

While speaking, one night, at a series of meet ings in B-, I saw in the back of the church, Tom Hill. Now, Tom kept a place about two miles out of town, known as the "Fish Ponds." It had, at one time, been a favorite resort for myself, as well as many of the boys, in our drinking days, for Tom was a social jolly fellow, kept good liquors, and could always give us a good trout supper. Knowing our meetings were taking from

Tom his best customers, we looked for little sympathy from that direction. With a prayer in my heart that he might be reached, a prayer that I fear had but little faith in it, for in those days I was a new convert, and had seen but little of the other, stuffing hair mattresses and pillows. wonderful working of the Holy Spirit among men As the meeting progressed, and man after man, stood up and expressed a determination, with God's help, to lead a new life, I watched Tom, and saw that he paid close attention. At the close of the meeting, when we called for pledge signers, to my astonishment Tom began to elbow his way through the crowd until he stood before the secretary's table, and with a trembling hand took a pencil and began to sign his name. Before he had finished I was at his side, and as he turned round, taking both his hands, I said, "Tom, what does this mean? are you

With a laugh, he said, "Why, yes; what is the good of keeping a rum-shop if you boys all sign the to do more? Just think how Laura Bridgman

But I knew when I looked into his eyes and saw them glistening with tears he was trying to keep from showing that something had touched his heart. Putting my arm on his shoulder, I said, "Yes, but there's something more; tell me what it is."

Well, Doc., you know my little Liz; last night she did not come home, and staid in town with a schoolmate, and came to your meeting, and all day to day I have been hearing of the excitement down here, how the "blue ribbons" were as thick on the I would see Jesus. As I muse, and, thinking, streets as flies in Summer-time. I had been drinking a good deal to-day, when I saw Liz coming My faith is roused, my spirit seemeth drinking down the road with a blue ribbon tied to her jacket; I was mad, and when she came in, I said, 'What have you got that thing tied in there for?" Drooping her head, she said, 'Papa, I've signed the pledge, and this is my badge.

Don't you know, child, you've disgraced me? on't you know you're father sells rum? what right O blessed hope! O glorious aspiration? have you to sign?' Her little lips quivered as she said, 'Yes, papa, I know it, for when the children get mad at me in school, they call me the rumseller's daughter, and tell me my father gets drunk and, papa, I thought if I signed the pledge and put on a ribbon, they'd know I didn't like to have you do so, and would not say so any more.' I turned and went into the bar-room and began to think the matter over; you know I love that girl, and I never thought before that I was a disgrace to her, and I always meant to get out of the business before she grew up. I never liked it, and only sold it for the money there was in it, but I've thought it all over I've done wrong. I've wronged myself. I've wronged you, boys, and God helping me, I'll never

The boys had gathered about us, and when Tom had finished, with a shout, they took him in their arms, placed him on the platform, the meeting was called to order, and Tom, with tears running down his face, told the audience the story. I wish you could have heard the audible "Thank Gods and Hallelujahs," and seen the men crowd forward to lead them.

Who shall say, "'Tis foolish for children to sign the pledge.

Several years have passed, and Tom stands a temperate man, and has done grand work for the Master. Little Lizzie is budding into womanhood. God grant it may be such a fair, sweet, living example, as her childhood gave promise of. I know both will forgive me for making public this little incident, so precious to us, and so fruitful of good results. - The Morning.

A LITTLE ROMANCE.—A college romance is told the Atlanta Constitution. Many years ago a ing man went to Yale College, The father was ry rich, and the youngster lived in grand style, the university. Suddenly the gentleman failed and had to withdraw his son from college. The boy, however, felt the necessity of an education, and determined to have one anyhow. He therefore went to work and learned a trade as a machinist While he was at his work his old associates cut him and refused to have anything to do with him. The young ladies with whom he had been a great favorite failed to recognize him. One day, while going from his work, he met a wealthy young lady who had been his friend. He had his tin dinner-bucket over his arm, and supposed she would cut him, as all the rest had done. She smiled pleasantly, and addressed him as "Tom," and insisted that he should sign, until 380 were enrolled. "A little child shall call and see her as he had always done. She said, There is no change in you as far as I am concerned." The years rolled on. The young work boy became wealthy and owner of a factory in which 1,500 men and women are employed. The young girl grew to womanhood and married. Her husband borrowed a large sum of money from the rich man, and died before he had paid it, leaving his family with but little property. The capitalist sent her, with his condolence, a receipted note for her husband's indebtedness; and now the son of the millionaire is going to marry the daughter of the one woman who was faithful and true to the young work-boy at college. - Exchange.

PARKS' COTTON YARNS! AWARDED THE ONLY MEDAL GIVEN AT THE CENTEN-NIA! EXHIBITION For Cotton Yarns of Canadian Manufacture.

Nor. 5's to 10's. WHITE, BLUE, RED, ORANGE AND GREEN. Made of good American Cotton with great care, Correctly numbered and Warranted Full Length and Weight.

WE would ask the purchasers of Cotton Warp to re VV member that our Yarn is spun on Throstle Frames, which make a stronger yarn than the Ring Frames, used in making American yarn.

It is also better twisted and more carefully reeled; each.

This hank being tied up in 7 leas of 120 yards each. This makes it much more easy to wind than when it is put up without leas—as the American is—and also saves a great leal of waste. Those acquainted with weaving will understand the great advantage it is to them to use yarn put up in this

Each 5 lb. bundle contains 10,000 yards in length and will make a length of Carpet in proportion to the number We have put more twist into this warp than it formerly had, and it will now make a more durable Carpet than can be made with any other material. Since its introduction by us, a few years ago, it has come into very general use throughout the country. All our goods have our name and address upon them. None other are genuine. WM.
