Convinced, perhaps, of the hopelessness of carryng on a warfare against such odds, some Ritualists have been considering in Conference in Londo what can be done in the way of concession. The Church Times announces the result as an "Eirenon," which opens with this confession : " If it were not for our brethren who are still in the hands of the Philistines, we should be content never to nention the legislation of 1874." Then follows this entence, which seems to be somewhat harsh for an 'Eirenicon": "As it is, we are in the position f settlers who have beaten off a horde of savages ant who have to deplore the fate of three or four o heir number who have fallen into the clutches of he assailants." Ritualists, however, are in the abit of using strong language toward their brethren of the Church Association, and we need not stop t omment upon it. What is more essential is that this Conference, composed of men of whom The Church Times says : "It would be impossible to uggest names of greater authority, whether as re ards Catholic doctrine or Catholic ritual," declared that, though the prayer-book "retains many vestiges of the foreign Protestant influence which effected the revision of 1552," "Churchmen ar

This is a concession of n unall significance, and the natural outcome of it was that "a considerable number of Ritual practices that are very commonly met with receiv neither encouragement nor sanction in the report.
