IF I COULD KEEP HER SO.

BY LOUISE CHANDLER MOULTON. Just a little baby, lying in my arms, Would that I could keep you with your baby

Helpless, clinging fingers; downy golden hair, Where the sunshine lingers, caught from other-

Blue eyes asking questions, lips that cannot speak, Roly-poly shoulders, dimple in your cheek : Dainty little blossom, in a world of woe; Thus I fain would keep you for I love you so.

Roguish little damsel, scarce six years old-Feet that never weary, hair of deeper gold; Restless, busy fingers, all the time at play, Tongue that never ceases talking all the day; Blue eyes learning wonders of the world about, Have come to tell you them-what an eager shout Winsome little damsel, all the neighbors know; Thus I long to keep you, for I love you so.

Sober little school-girl, with your strap of books, And such grave importance in your puzzled looks; Solving weary problems, poring over sums, Yet with tooth for sponge cake and for sugar plums ; Reading books of romance in your bed at night, Waking up to study in the morning light; Anxious as to ribbons, deft to tie a bow. Full of contradictions-I would keep you so.

Sweet and thoughtful maiden, sitting by my side, All the world's before you, and the world is wide ; Hearts are there for winning, hearts are there to break.

Has your own, shy maiden, just begun to wake? Is that rose of dawning glowing on your cheek, Telling us in blushes what you will not speak? Shy and tender maiden, I would fain forego All the golden future, just to keep you so.

All the listening angels saw that she was fair, Ripe for fair unfolding in the upper air; Now the rose of dawning turns to lily white, And the close-shut eyelids veil the eyes from sight All the past I summon as I kiss her brow-Babe, and child, and maiden, all are with me now Oh! my heart is breaking: but God's love I know-Safe among the angels, he will keep her so.

To-morrow was the Sabbath-school picnic that Sue had been looking forward to ever since the snow went off. Was she not going to have a whole long holiday out of the hot, noisy mill, and going on the boat to the nice cool woods-how she had elect myself professor of East Indian history, and in the rise of the house, and were, on the whole, however, to Sue's happiness. All the rest of the girls in her class were to have new pretty dresses, and she had nothing but her old white one that she had almost outgrown; and besides it was darnedwell, I do not dare to say how many times. The orightness all faded out of Sue's face when she thought of that, but then she could not have another possibly; and perhaps with fresh ribbons it would not look so very bad. So she had been saving up her pennies. Slow, tedious work it was, but at last there was a quarter, enough for two yards and a vez, the eldest son, hastened to his side; but was half. To-morrow was the picnic, and to-night she was going down the street to buy the ribbons. She happened just then to die by assassination, thus felt so happy that she almost ran on the way home rom the mill, until she came to Mrs. Mellen's. Mrs. Mellen went out working by the day, any where she could get work. And Jimmy, her little girls at once.
