THE INTELLIGENCER FOR 1882.

Of the past we may not express an opinion Twenty-nine years have passed since it entered on | not be asked to contribute to Foreign Missions; its mission. To do the work has been the part of and other similar expressions are often heard. Dr. its editor, to judge of its character and the effect Duff says some things good to be remembered by is the part of its readers. We know that the spirit, style and aim of the paper have received much commendation, and there have been not a few home, -that there is enough of work to be done at to the families who receive it. These things are greatly encouraging, for we are anxious above everything that it may do good to all who read itcomforting the saints, strengthening the weak, it may be increasingly useful we shall continue to labour and pray; and we ask all who are interested in the paper and the work it aims to do to pray to And, if we act on such a plea, we may be charged the same end.

We look forward to the new year with hope and courage. We trust it has greater prosperity in store for the INTELLIGENCER than it has yet enjoy- glad that so much is doing for home; but ten times ed. It will not be any less earnest, vigorous and more may yet be done both for home and for abroad faithful than in the present or any preceding year. In its general tone there will be no alteration. Its position regarding the moral and religious questions of the day is well known. There will be no change, unless it be in the direction of intensifying its protest against and its exposure and condemnation of good from whomsoever or wheresoever it may

Of religious news it will always contain a full supply-fresh and readable.

The secular news department will be well sustained. All important events at home and abroad will be duly recorded.

The INTELLIGENCER is especially suited to families that can take but one paper, as it furnishes all the secular news of importance, in addition to the news of Christian work and the general religious and family reading. In soliciting subscribers our the nation, we bow in sorrow and submission. The traditions, the Syrian Christians trace their origin friends may use this fact to advantage.

nation. Through it alone may the Churches communicate with each other, and the facts concerning the denominational work and progress be brought to public attention. That it has been a benefit to the denomination is not pretended to be denied. That it may be more so we desire and labour. Extension of its circulation is the increase of its usefulness. It ought to be in every Free Baptist family in the denomination. Will the ministers say such a monster should be smitten to death at surrounding heathenism, to the truth of the Chris. Czar as anti-christ, and living a nomadic life to and others interested in the denomination make earnest effort to introduce it more widely? Its friends are its only agents. There is a great deal of trashy and dangerous literature in circulation. Published cheaply seeks to find its way into all the homes of the goes. Christians should counteract its evil influence by extending the circulation of pure reading.
