CHILDISH WISDOM Twas the hour of prayer, and the farmer stood With a thankful heart and a lowly mind, And prayed to the Author of every good

That the Father of all would be very kind. And bless his creatures with raiment and food That the blessing each day might be renewed That every want might find relief, And plenty for hungry, joy for grief, Be measured out by the merciful One,

To all who suffered beneath the sun. The prayer concluded, the godly man Went forth in peace to inspect his farm ; And by his side, delighted, ran, Glowing with every healthful charm,

A little son, a sprightly boy, Whose home was love and whose life was joy And they rambled over the golden fields, And the father said, "The harvest yields

A plentiful crop, my son, this year ; My barns are too small for the grain, I fear." And they wandered on through row upon row Of plumy sheaves, and at length the child,

With earnest look and a rosy glow On his shining cheek, looked up and smiled. And said, "My father, do you not pray For the poor and needy day by day, That God, the good, would the hungry feed?"

"I do, my son." "Well, I think as you plead"-His eye waxed bright, for his soul shone through it-"That God, if He had your wheat, would do it.

HAL AND HIS SISTER ALICE. "Well, my man, what can I do for you to-day?" The question was asked in a kindly tone by an old gentleman looking through a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles at a young boy on a narrow cot bedstead in a hospital ward.

The boy looked up, saying sadly : "I reckon there ain't nothin' to be done now.

" Is it so bad as that?" "Doctor says I can't get well."

"Wouldn't you like for me to send for some your friends?" "There ain't no one but my sister Alice, and reckon she don't want to come "

"Why, don't she care for you?" "Yes; but I struck her yesterday."

"Struck her! I am sorry to hear that." "Yes, and I was sorry after I did it, for I never did that before; but I didn't tell her so. And when I went out and got my papers, I jumped for says I'm going to die. gentleman. "She may be wondering where you are. Wouldn't you like to see her?" "Reckon I would! and you may go if you like.

After receiving directions for finding Alice, the old gentleman left; and the invalid boy closed his eyes wearily, only to open them suddenly on feeling a light touch on his cheek. It was the kiss of a little

"Tom Brady told me all about it," said the girl, "and I came last night, but they wouldn't let me in. Won't you soon be well enough to come home again? It was awful lonesome last night; and Mrs. Brady was cross because you had got hurt, and she was afraid she would lose her rent. Don't you believe they'd let me stay here with you till you get well? I've got a whole dollar that I've saved, and I won't eat much.'

The poor boy, failing to swallow a sob, turned his head that his sister might not see his distress. but she put down the basket she had brought on her arm, and leaning over him, with the tears in her eyes, said kindly, "Does it hurt very, very much, Hal ?" Alice sprang up, and looked wildly at the gentleman, as if in hopes he might contradict the boy, but he only answered her by rubbing his spectacles and lowering his eyes. "O Hal!" she cried, throwing her arms around the boy, "I love you so! Then she wept convulsively for a moment; when she controlled herself sufficiently to ask the old gentleman if he did not think the doctor could do something to make him well. "I am afraid not, my dear. But he is in the

COAL,

Well, boys, what are you looking at so eagerly? Only a piece of coal, do you say, Charlie? I shouldn't suppose you could find anything worth looking at in a smutty piece of coal. Ah, well! I am so glad my boys have found that only a piece of coal, as Charlie calls it, is worth looking at.

I think I can tell you something about it that will make you open your eyes wider still. You know how astonished and puzzled you were the other night at the tricks of the "magic man," who turned beans into sugar-plums, and did all sorts of wonderful things before your very eyes. Now this piece of coal is the most wonderful piece of magic in the world. Suppose I tell you that this hard black lump once had life. Yes, boys. I am in earnwhere I'm going. Dear Sir—I most cheerfully add my testimonial to the great number you are daily receiving in favor of your VEGETINE. I have been troubled with rheumatism for several years; also with blotches and pimples breaking out upon my face and neck.

A friend recommended VEGETINE, and, after using several bottles, I have had no more trouble with rheumatism, and the blotches on my face and neck have disappeared. I have recommended VEGETINE to some of my friends who were troubled with rheumatism, and my friends who were troubled with rheumatism, and
