The "Stories from the Northern Myths" end in this issue with an account of the saying of Balder, pecially bright and anecdotal. Mrs. Dodge has a long and very interesting instalment of her serial, "Donald and Dorothy," which will be eagerly read by all who have been following the fortunes of these two young people. Among all the verses scattered through the September pages, it is enough to mention the poem entitled "The Cockatoos," by Celia Thaxter, and "The Land of Noddy," a quaint, pretty, unconventional lullaby, by Rossiter Johnson. There are the usual departments, and an enter-taining story, for the little folks, of a pig that went sailing in a horse-trough. HARPER'S MAGAZINE for September opens with a beautiful frontispiece, entitled "A Sunday Morning in Surrey." The same artist, with equal charm, illustrates Mrs. Little's papers, "In Surrey." English country scenery has never been so attractively presented as in this delightful paper. Another painful drowning accident occurred near Sandy Cove on Saturday last. A fine young lad, son of Mr. Geo. A. Morehouse, of Lakeside, was drowned on the lake while sailing. No one appears to have seen the accident. The body was recovered some two hours after. What renders this occurrence more than usually painful is the fact that this is the second son that Mr. Morehouse has lost in a similar manner, within little more than a year.
