HE KNOWETH THE WAY THAT

Poetry.

I TAKE. I know not, the way is so misty, The joys or the griefs it shall bring, What clouds are o'erhanging the future, What flowers by the roadside shall spring ; But there's One who will journey beside me, Nor in weal nor in woe will forsake ; And this is my solace and comfort, "He knoweth the way that I take."

I stand where the cross-roads are meeting, And know not the right from the wrong ; No beckoning fingers direct me, No welcome floats to me in song ; But my Guide will soon give me a token By wilderness, mountain, or lake : Whatever the darkness about me, "He knoweth the way that I take."

It is true that I cannot perceive him, If backward or forward I go : He hideth himself, but he tries me, That more of his love I may know. And O, that the gold may be purer For the trouble that comes for love's sake I am not afraid of life's sorrow, "He knoweth the way that I take."

Who knoweth ? The Father who loves me ; The Saviour who suffered for me The Spirit all present to guide me-Whatever the future shall be. So let me have hope and take courage ; This truth shall my joy anthem make The Lord is my strong tower of refuge, "He knoweth the way that I take."

And I know that the way leadeth homeward To the land of the pure and blest, To the country of ever fair summer, To the city of peace and of rest : And there shall be healing for sickness, And fountains, life's fever to slake ; What matters beside ? I go heavenward ; "He knoweth the way that I take."

"REMEMBER THE WORDS OF THE LORD JESUS." BY KATE SUMNER BURR. The chief among ten thousand. The fairest of the fair, More wonderfully lovely Than rose or lily are, We hear Thee sweetly saying, "Ask, and it shall be given !"

In Thee are peace and pardon, And holiness and heaven.

MATTHEW vii. 1.

When Christ, in mercy, came to save

The sinner from a hopeless grave,

He to the world this mandate gave---

There may be far more need than then

To kindly use the voice and pen,

To gently treat our fellow-men-

May loving feelings ever swell

Our list of virtues, and impel

Us in pure charity to dwell-

If welcome blessings are our share,

If life is passing free from care,

If overwhelming troubles rain

Let us allow an all-wise God

'Tis his to banish or admit,

To exercise the chastening rod.

Or bless with an approving nod---

'Tis his the judgment throne to sit,

For the first half of the night I could not sleep for very weariness, and my bones ached so ; I must admit that I shed a few tears, but when, at last, I did close my eyes, I had some very pleasant dreams. Why shouldn't it be so? Are not our dreams largely shaped and colored by our experiences during the day ?

Next day I returned to college, and when, as all must do after an absence, I wrote my excuse to be sent to the Faculty, I was so proud of my exploit. that I wrote, " I have no excuse to offer ; the reason for my absence is that I stayed away to plant a garden for a poor old man." I was allowed to " make up' the lessons I had missed, and, ah ! how easily those lessons were learned ! I could almost remember them from a single reading, and I had good luck" when I came to recite them.

Now, boys, believe me, I would not have that act erased from my recollection for the Consulate of China. It was an act inspired by a feeling of kindness, and it has "found me out." In what way has it found me? Oh, iu many, very many ways. First, it brought me such thanks from those old people. I can hear their voices even now, methinks, calling down blessings on my head. Second ly, it so stirred me that I do really believe I learned my lessons easier for the next two weeks than at any other time in my life. When our noblest affections are aroused, our intellectual powers are at their best. Thirdly, it earned me the love and good-will of the entire community where the work was done, so that some people, who had not attended church before, now began to come regularly. Fourthly, whenever during that summer-a portion of which I spent in the place--I had occasion to pass the little house, the sight of that thrifty garden made me supremely happy.
