IN GLADNESS.

Alas ! we are not so ready, In the day of our joy and crown, With the palms and the fragrant incense Laid at his altar down ; And how it must grieve the Master That his own are so slow to praise. In the flush of their peace and gladness, The goodness which brims the days. Lord, for thy waves of blessing,

Lord, for thy breezes of balm, For our hopes, our work, and our wages, And the bliss of our household's calm, For the gold of our garnered harvests, For our ships that are sailing the sea, For the human loves that sublime us, Oh ! whom can we thank but thee ?

Forgive that we weep like children, At the shadow that comes for a night, And are heedless again like children, When gladness returns with the light. Forgive that the earth-cares fret us, And the burdens bind us down. And still let us walk in the sunshine, And not in the gloom of thy frown.

Oh ! lift us, Lord, to the summits Whereon we may dwell with thee ! Oh ! teach us how we may worship The Saviour who sets us free ; That so in our joy and triumph, As aye in our grief and dole. We may go in our love to the Healer, The touch of whose hand makes whole.

THE FALL OF A MOUNTAIN.

Some seventy years ago an old man sat at the door of his cottage in the Swiss village of Goldau enjoying the warmth of the Summer sunshine, and there with dark clumps of trees. All around the great purple mountain stood up against the sky, as the shadow of the neat white church, like chickens nestling under the wing of the mother hen.

But it was in vain that he looked for any trace of the village or even of the valley itself. The green sunny upland, where the laborers had been working and the children frolicking but a few hours He was too young, this little elf. before, were now one hideous disorder of fallen rocks, bare gravel and black cindery dust, amid which he wandered at random, calling despairingly And bring a shade to the dancing eyes. upon his lost darling.

But the answer came at last; a clear, musical call, which rose from a shapeless heap of ruin that even he had failed to recognize as his pretty little cottage. Hurrying to the spot he began to tear away the rubbish with the strength of a giant, and speedily drew forth the child unhurt, the timbers, as if by miracle, having formed a kind of arch over her, completely protecting her from injury. Brave old Francoise had been less fortunate. Her left arm was so badly hurt that she never recovered the use of it, and to the end of her life she was timid and nervous from the effects of that terrible night. But, compared with the rest of the ll-fated villagers, she might well esteem herself ortunate. Four-fifths of them were killed on the spot, many more crippled for life, and those who scaped found themselves reduced to absolute beg gary. Of Goldau itself nothing remained but the bell of its steeple, which was found more than a mile away. The lower end of Lake Lowertz, further down the valley, was completely choked up by the falling rocks ; and the waters thus dislodged rushed in a mighty wave, seventy feet high, over the island in the center, sweeping away every living thing upon it. The once happy and beautiful valley is still a frightful desert, and here and there among the surrounding hills you may find some whitehaired grandfather who himself witnessed the calamity, and will tell you in his quaint mountain speech, how the Rossberg fell upon Goldau.-Harper's Young People.

A CHINESE NEW YEAR'S DAY.

In reading over an article on the Chinese to-day, I thought that there might be some little people who would like to hear something about the strangers who are coming to live in the western part of our continent

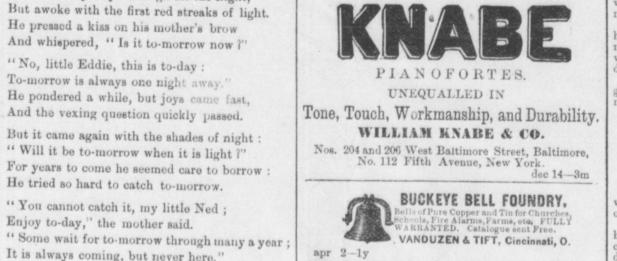

There is a part of San Francisco which is given these things. BORING THE EARS .- A great deal has been recently written on the subject of boring the ears "for the sake of the eyes." It is always easy to find excuses for any practice which ministers to vanity. That the counter-irritation set up by boring the ear and wearing a ring may, during the few days following the operation, have some effect on the eyes, supposing these organs to be the seat of any low form of inflammation, is just possible, but that permanent good should be done by wearing rings in the ears after they have ceased to irri- WINDSOR COTTONS ! tate is inconceivable.
