LOWLY, BUT NOT IN VAIN.

BY THE REV. N. F. CARTER. Mine may not be the shining of the sun, Lighting the pathway of great worlds afar; No more the moon's full light when day is done; Nor yet the golden twinkling of a star.

But if a glow-worm's soft and steady light Be only mine to give in sweet content, A tiny glow-worm's shining in the night To break the gloom for some poor pilgrim sent; Perchance in ways Time's saintly feet have trod, I still may light some soul to heaven and God.

Mine may not be the beauty of the rose, Fragrant and fresh with morning's dewy balm; Nor orange-blossoms, pure as falling snows,

And sweet as ever strain of wedding-psalm. But if in lowliness my whole life through, A lily-of-the-valley I may be-A lily-of-the-valley to the few

In some spring hour of gladness drawn to me, I still may hope through God's good will and grace, To woo some soul to seek the Saviour's face ! I am what God has made me, and I know

I have a place, a time, a work, a way; So with a happy heart I would bestow My humble meed of blessing while I may; Content each golden day to find my place, Do well my work, and mark my way with love,

To be what God would have me, by his grace, Serenely climbing to the hills above! And there, I humbly hope, some day to see Crowned souls won to their crowning by my plea -Christian Weekly.

CAUGHT.

BY SYDNEY DAYRE.

"You promised to tell us sometime how you got that scar on your forehead, uncle." "Yes, boys, but the story is so little to my credit that I have felt rather inclined to put it off. However, I'll tell it now; perhaps it may do you good -perhaps not."

harm very often. I don't believe all boys do, but either side."-Standard. my brother George and I did, or I should not now be telling you how I got that scar.

We lived, you know, on the banks of the Susquehanna. Do you know the meaning of that Indian name is "Winding River?" It is well named, for besides its greater winding as shown on the map, described by school-boys of my day as "a zig-zag line in the form of the letter N." its whole course is full of the loveliest little curves and bends, some gentle, some abrupt, all beautiful and leading on and on to new beauties. I have heard old travelers say that some of its scenery is unsurpassed by a thing in the way of quiet river landscape.

Well-the boys who are so fortunate as to live along such rivers have good times. There is fishing in all its varieties, with line and with net and with outline-you don't know what outline fishing is? We used to take a half-inch rope that would reach, say, half across the river. Along this at intervals of about ten feet were tied pieces of fish-line perhaps two feet long. These were hooked and baited and then one end of the rope or outline was fastened at the shore to some underground branch or root, the other being anchored as far out in the river as it would reach. There was nothing very sportsmanlike in this style of fishing, but it was by no means poor fun to go in the early morning in a boat along that line (which was put out overnight) and pull up each short line with the chance of finding a perch, "chub," pickerel, or possibly, but not probably, a bass on the end of it. How good those fish tasted for breakfast!

Another way was to spear the fish, at night, with a fire of pitch-pine knots made in an old dripping pan mounted on a pole firmly fixed to the side of the boat; I don't know whether the boys of to-day use what we did then, a kind of stuff which we bought, in the shape of small black shells, like cocoa shells, only larger. These we threw into the river when we first went out; the fish ate them eagerly, and they had an intoxicating effect on them, for they would rush and splash about in the water, making it easy for us to find them. I have since thought it was a cruel advantage to take of the poor things who knew no better than to take that into their stomachs which would lead them to ruin-unlike beings blessed with sense-(or have they sense?) who do the very same thing knowingly !

I did not, in those days, think much of the picturesque feature of this sport, but I well remember the glow on the trees and the gleam on the water. I think we might easily have been taken for some order of ferocious night goblin in the red glare with our formidable spears-"

"Ah! was it one of those gave you the scar?" " No, I am coming to that. It came through a much tamer way of fishing, The long bridge which crossed the river near my home was a very old one, the piers being built in the old-fashioned way, not of stone or of heavy open timber-work, as we see now-a-days, but more like wooden boxes, pointing, of course, an inclined plane up stream, but having the lower end open. They were partly filled in a year ago. with loose, rough stone. These piers were favorite resorts for a quiet, unambitious fish when we had nothing more venturesome on hand. We would row out to one of them, get inside and fish as long

Then I would climb down again when I had enjoyed his alarm and perplexity at not finding me.

No sooner said than done. I found it rather difficult, for the timbers which supported the planking were some distance apart, and very weak with age. I perceived now that the real supports of the bridge consisted of strong timber which had been cording to their needs; instead of insisting, that toes seem too moist, beat in a few fine bread crumbs. shell as I found to my cost. For as I climbed through the opening and reached the incline, hard work, for it shelved over a little, the whole thing began to crumble under me-crashing down fifteen feet below, where on one side lay those jagged stones, on the other the deep, swift running water. night, and said: "I do wish you would stop snor-With a desperate effort I half leaped, half scrambled | ing, for I want to hear it thunder.

up close to the outside wall of the bridge, the decayed wood giving way under every step, till I gained a narrow ledge formed of the renewed timber. Here I was safe, but here I found I must stay until help came, for there were no sound supports within my reach.

As I sat on this narrow seat with scarcely any rest for my feet, I began to realize that I was in no pleasant position, and looked anxiously about to see what might be my chances of getting out of the trap I had got myself into. Things were not promising. Less than an eighth of a mile above me the great dam stretched itself from shore to shore. Its hollow roar was enough to prevent my voice being heard far in any direction, and to this was added the ceaseless din of the flouring mills, saw mills and paper mills at either end of it. I could only wait for George to come; but hours passed, during which my cries for help were thrown back to me by the pitiless noise. As I grew cramped and exhausted and dizzy, it seemed to wrap itself around me as if to bear me down to the angry

I never have been able to understand how I clung there so long. The afternoon wore away, and as the shadows grew longer I could dimly hear shouting and perceive more movement on shore. Then rays of light shone from down the river-artificial light, I knew. There certainly was unusual excitement about the mills, and as twilight deepened I could just see a boat put out from one of them and expect judgment in a child or patience under trial come nearly towards me, when it turned down

THINGS MONEY CAN'T DO.

Some boys and girls have an idea that money can do almost anything, but this is a mistake. not totally destroyed.

The public are cautioned against a custom which is growing quite common of late among a certain class of medicine dealers, and which is this: When asked for a bottle of PAIN-KILLER, they suddenly discover that they are "sold out," "but have another article just as good, if not better," which they will supply at the same price. The object of this deception is transparent. These substitutes are made up to sell on the great reputation of the PAIN-KILLER; and being compounded of the vilest and cheapest drugs, are bought by the dealer at about half what he pays for the genuine PAIN-KILLER, which enables him, therefore, to realize a few cents more profit per bottle upon the imitation article than he can on the genuine.

For Sudden Colds, Neuralgic, Rheumatic, and all other Pains in any part of

Perry Davis' Pain-Killer is Unequalled. IT CURES ALMOST INSTANTLY.

Price 20c., 25c., and 50c.; Large Bottles Cheapest. SOLD BY ALL MEDICINE DEALERS.

All the right, title, and interest of Peter Riley to that certain leasehold piece or parcel of land demised the said Peter Riley by Sarah Elizabeth Hazen and Johanna R. Ritchie by Indenture, bearing date the thirty-first day of October, A. D., 1874, and described in said Indenture as WE would ask the purchasers of Cotton Warp to re-member that our Yarn is spun on Throstle Frames which make a stronger yarn than the Ring Frames, used in naking American yarn. It is also better twisted and more carefully reeled; each hank being tied up in 7 leas of 120 yards each. This makes it much more easy to wind than when it is put up without leas-as the American is-and also saves a great Those acquainted with weaving will understand the great advantage it is to them to use yarn put up in this
