Poetry.

THE LORD MAY COME TO-DAY. Busy servant in the vineyard, Earnest soldier in the fray, Cheer your heart and upward glancing, Think-the Lord may come to-day.

Weak and weary-troubled mourner, Fearing danger in the way, Be no longer sinful, caring, For the Lord may come to-day.

Are you busy, all too busy, With the things that fade away-Wealth, or fame, or gain, or pleasure? Drop them, He may come to-day. Or an idler in the vineyard, Others pass you on the way? Wake, and live as an immortal, Lest the Lord should come to-day. Is the blood upon your garments?

Have you on your pure array? Naught can hide a guilty sinner, If in light he come to-day. Are you waiting for the Master? He is surely on his way :

We can almost hear his footfall-Blessed Jesus! come to-day. -London Christian.

A SUNSET.

It is a memory-haunted eve, And o'er the silent sea The magic fragrance of the past

Is wafted soft to me, As though she breathed it from her rest. In that far splendor of the west. Each wavelet rippling to the shore

And dying at my feet, Speaks, like some dear, long-silent voice, In liquid murmur sweet, Of days that evermore will be A sacred hidden joy to me. The golden path across the sea

Deepens its sparkling glow, Into the solemn tenderness Of sunsets long ago: And the faint sounds of evening seem Like broken echoes of a dream. The flush upon the distant hills,

The dip of yonder oar, All changing lights upon the sea, All whispers from the shore Are like a chalice filled for me With purest wine of memory.

JENNIE'S GRADUATION DRESS. "Now go on with your studying, Jennie. It's useless to discuss the matter.'

"But, mother, I don't see--" "Of course you don't see, dear, but when your father has decided, he has decided, you know. Don't think any more about it. Come, I can't spare you but fifteen minutes more. You must help me on Johnny's jacket-just the buttonholes, my eyes are so poor."

"Why don't you get Miss Stitchson to make the button-holes ?

"Don't ask me. What did your father say yesterday noon, and again just now at supper-time? If you will make them I can get the jacket finished to-night. He needs it enough." "Now, Mother Mayberry, it's too bad! Tom's suit is shabby, but I don't believe he cares. One day more won't make much difference any way ; and I will help on the button-holes to-morrow afternoon if Prudy don't come for me to practice that duet with her."

"No. no, dear. 'Never put off till to-morrow what can be done to-day,'-Grandma's motto, you know. I wish you would bear it in mind more than you do. There-now you musn't say another word -keep your thoughts on your lesson. I shan't speak for fifteen minutes."

At this Jennie resumed studying, for she was as desirous as her mother was for her to be correct in recitations. She had been dreading this last review in history, which was to determine her rank in scholarship. And her father was anxious that she should stand high at graduation-only three weeks hence. He had even taken pains to go over with her all the battles of the rebellion and the events of the Franco-German war, dates were such a trouble to her; and taught her an old method of his own for memorizing such things accurately.

She went on patiently with the words of the book. But I am sorry to say her thoughts wandered to Prudence Winn's new dress, and to a small package in her pocket which she had not yet had the courage -opportunity, she would have said-to show her mother; yet which she must see this very evening if her long cherished hopes were to be fulfilled.

A pencil was needed to mark the battle of the time. Wilderness for her memorizing method, and in taking it from her pocket out came the package also. Her pink cheeks took on a deeper hue as she hastily snatched at it before it fell to the floor, and there was a confused droop of her quivering eyelids before her mother's questioning glance. Not a them right. word was said, but Mrs. Mayberry extended her hand and Jennie dared not ignore the unspoken re-

"Send for samples?"

"Without consulting their parents? I hope not, Jennie. How could you?'

There was no answer, and the question was repeated. But before she had time to reply, Mr. Mayberry and Tommy-who had been busy over an hour in the barn looking after the comfort of the little heifer and Nan, her mother, and seeing that Mr. Mayberry, quick to read faces, saw that not the trouble, I hope? Let's run over the battles again, so as to be sure of them." And he took up the book which she had pushed aside.

Mrs. Mayberry laid the stripes of silk upon the brok. "What do you think of those?" she said gently. "Those ?" he asked. "Why, what are they? How came you by thein ?" "Is it best for Jennie to have a graduation suit like either of them !"

"Our Jennie? Good grandmother of Methuselah! Our little Jennie rigged out like a fifty-yearold? You're joking, wife!" Jennie had ceased crying and now looked up anxiously. " Never was I more in earnest, John."

"Well, I don't pretend to know about these things. But you don't really want it, do you, child? Such a gloomy thing. Why, you ought to have something bright and cheerful then, it seems to me."

"It would be very serviceable, said Jennie, meekly. "Serviceable-how?" queried her father. Your mother's dresses are always serviceable-and they are not silk. And then look at the cost of it. Whew! Ten-fifteen dollars, I suppose." " More than double that," returned Mrs. May-

"That settles the question. No, it will not be serviceable for my daughter-not at that price." "But if I get the school at Stapleton!" asked

"Ah! If! Time enough to talk about silk dresses when you've money you don't know what to do with. If you do teach, you shan't begin fer over a year."

" More than half the girls in our class will have silks for graduation, Prudy says, and-" "I suppose she will; she looks like that kind of a girl. And, as usual, her father is going to borrow my mowing machine next Summer, and the new plough that I must buy in April. No, no, daughter -no black silk for you yet. However-let me see I have it now? One of my happy thoughts--just in the nick of time, I declare!

He drew out his pocket-book, and from its folds took several bank-bills. "Mr. Simonds paid for his hay this afternoon I'm right glad to get the money just now-was intending it for a certain purpose, a plan your mother and I made a while ago. But I've changed my mind within an hour and, Jennie, if you'll wear the same dress you have on now-this neat gray flannel with the pretty pink necktie-at the graduation, you shall have every cent he paid me-to spend as you choose." Jennie looked troubled.

"I'll be there to see," he added. "Moreover and likewise," he continued merrily, "Tommy and I will get as many spruce trees and as much ever green to trim the school-room as you will accept. And mother'll lend all her plants, every flower-poty I've no doubt.

"Certainly, with pleasure," responded Mrs. Mayberry for then you will really begin your life as a woman, said Mr. Mayberry, "ought to be a joyful occasion And yet a serious and thoughtful one, as you then lay aside childish things and take the first step to ward the sober realities of life. And I want you to know, Jennie, that the first step will have much to do in determining your future course. Don't begin with show and extravagance then, even if you -that is, I-can afford it; it would not be right

"All the girls are telling what they shall wear, and I thought-I expected-" began Jennie in a rembling voice.

Her father interrupted her, placing the bank-bills n her hand.

"Think of it over night, dear. You have had good teachers, and you are fond of them, I know, and are attached to your mates. Have had many appy hours in the old school-room; will wish to ook back on the last days spent there with pleasant memories. Spend the money—it is yours now in a way that will give you the most delightful re-

" Now, please let us drop the subject," said her mother, laying the samples in her work-stand, and taking up Tommy's jacket. "Am I to have your nelp on the button-holes, dear?" she added quietly. Jennie gave her a bright smile, gathered up the bits of silk, went directly to the stove and threw them into the fire.

"Button-holes, buttons-anything you say," was her answer, as she seated herself on a stool at her mother's side, that both might sew at the same

Graduation day was remarkably fair for March. The school-room was crowded with the parents and friends of the pupils. Everybody admired the decorations of evergreen and flowering plants, which Mr. Mayberry not only provided, but assisted in

AUNT ANN'S STORY.

Little Arthur Grayson was standing at a window watching the steadily falling snow, when he suddenly exclaimed : "Oh, Frank, come to the window uick, 'Old Rummy' is coming, and he's so drunk he can hardly walk!

"He does look funny, doesn't he?" said Frank, but you know mother says we ought to pity him stead of laughing when he reels so." "I wonder why he will get so drank They say he always licks Tommy dreadfully when he gets ome. I'm glad my father doesn't drink and lick

"Who is that stopping to take him into his "It's that rich Mr. Manning who moved into Murray Hill last summer; I shouldn't think he would want to tuck those nice robes around him as he does, should you?" From another window I had watched the scene and heard the comments of the boys, and closing my book and pushing my glasses from my eyes, I asked: "Who wants a story this snowy morning?" Both turned and eagerly chorused, "I do, I do." 'Me too, a fa'y sto'y," said "Little Mites," who ad come it time to hear my question.

The boys drew their chairs close to mine and gathering "Little Mites" in my arms, I said : "No, not a fairy story this time, but a true one for the

Many years ago when I was called Miss Annie, nstead of Aunt Ann, I taught school in what was hen known as a "down east" town. In those lays the teachers didn't board all the time in one place as now, but boarded round, the length of time at each place being according to the number of scholars sent to school. Not far from one of these marding places was a lovely little grove, and often after school I took my book and shawl and went there to read.

"S'awl for ?" interrupted "Little Mites." Oh, I spread it on the ground to sit on; it was pefore people had got so afraid of sitting on the ground and had to be swung up in the air in these nings they call "hammocks." One night I saw two bright, smart-looking boys about your ages, come into the grove, and without seeing me they threw themselves on the ground behind a clump of ushes near by, took some cigars from their pockets and began to smoke. In a few minutes one of them started up and shouted to a boy in a field close by, "George, come in here-we're having some fun." George leaped the fence and came ounding through the underbrush, but as soon as e saw what the "fun" was, stopped. "Come long," said Ed, the first speaker. "we've one more and you shall have it-they're prime." "No," replied George, "I have never smoked and never intend to, for I've promised mother I 239 AND 241 CHARLOTTE ST., ST. JOHN, N. B. would neither smoke nor chew.' "Ho, ho, you little baby, run right home to your

"Don't you suppose she would smell my clothes and breath," indignantly replied George, "and even if she didn't I should break my promise to my nother," saying which he turned and went away whistling, while the boys filled the air with their eers and shouts.

Now that was a long time ago; but you have just seen George, or the "rich Mr. Manning," as you called him, take Ed, who is now a drinking, niserable man, into his sleigh, to save him from falling into the gutter this cold morning.

I paused, and Frank putting his arm around his ounger brother, said: "We'll keep our promise o mother, and try and be good boys so as to make noble men like Mr. Manning, won't we, Arthur?' "Yes," he replied, "even if the boys do laugh at us sometimes.

And my boys who read this story, do you keep our promises to mother? Do you wish to become emperate, honest, respectable men? If so, remember that now is the time to lay the foundation on which to build the nobler structure. - Maine

NELLIE'S RING.

Nellie had lost her ring, -a pretty gold ring that Aunt Lou had given her for a keepsake. Auntie had told her not to wear it until her finger had grown large enough for it. But Nellie had disbeyed, and had worn the ring when she went over o see Fanny Roy; and when she came back, to her great grief there was no ring on her finger. "That comes from not obeying Auntie," she hought. "I will never disobey her again." Some weeks after, Aunt Lou said : "Nellie, I am going over to see Mrs. Brown's sick baby. I the field and get some nice catnip. You will find it growing along close to the fence, on this side." Nellie was busy making a doll's bedquilt, and she was not pleased to leave her work. "I can get catnip at the bottom of the garden,

SUBSTITUTES.

The public are cautioned against a custom which is growing quite common of late among a certain class of medicine dealers, and which is this: When asked for a bottle of PAIN-KILLER, they suddenly discover that they are "sold out," "but have another article just as good, if not better," which they will supply at the same price. The object of this deception is transparent. These substitutes are made up to sell on the great reputation of the PAIN-KILLER; and being compounded of the vilest and cheapest drugs, are bought by the dealer at about half what he pays for the genuine PAIN-KILLER, which enables him, therefore, to realize a few cents more profit per bottle upon the imitation article than he can on the genuine.
