The deaths since the outbreak of the epidemic number 2,661, as will be seen by the following: April, 2; May, 12; June, 22; July, 84; August, 212; September, 697; October, 1,632. Total, 2,661. These are terrible figures to contemplate at the very beginning of winter, with snow and a hard frost on the ground, which invariably increases the epidemic. The prospects are by no means hopeful for the riddance of the scourge, at least during the winter months, as, whilst there are nearly 4,000 ill of small-pox in over 1,200 houses in the city, there is only hospital accommodation for 400 patients with from 60 to 80 new cases reported to the authorities daily. For thirty-three years the INTELLIGENCER has ived and gone to and fro on its mission. What has been and done are matters of record. And, now, what of the future? Answering this question, a brief outline of plans for 1836 is in

A NEW DEPARTURE. Several times since it began its career, changes have been made in its size and in its general arrangement. In every change, the design has been to give the subscribers a better paper and fuller value for the price paid. And each change has, we think, been a real improvement heartily appreciated by the readers.

We have determined on still another change, and have arranged to have it take place at the beginseveral reasons for the proposed change, among them these :- (1). Nearly all the religious weeklies pages form; and (3) while there will be but trifling ncrease in the size of the sheet, it is expected by judicious " packing" to be able to give even more reading than at present. If the venture warrants it-and we hope it may-there will be further enlargement later.

OF THE CHARACTER

of the INTELLIGENCER it is enough to say that it will be, as always, a paper safe and profitable to put into every family in the land. What it has been in spirit and aim it will continue to be. It will give careful attention to the news of Christian work at home and abroad; it will discuss and keep its readers informed on the moral and religious questions that agitate the world; it will furnish carefully prepared and selected religious reading suited to readers of all ages and degrees of Christian experience, and helpful to them; it will give special attention to news of the ministers and churches of its own denomination, and to the discussion of questions of chief interest to them; of CASH AND PLEDGES FOR MONCTON LIQUIDATION it will not forget the young in the homes it visits, but will minister to their instruction and pleasure; departments will be kept up and such others as may increase the variety and interest of its con-

There is a vast amount of bad literature in circulation. It is doing its destructive work more effectually than many know. Its publishers circulate it with a diligence that should shame those whose efforts to circulate safe and helpful reading are so few and feeble.

One of the chief duties of Christian ministers, teachers and parents is to do their best to drive out the bad by the introduction of the good. The religious papers of the country have special claims on their sympathies and should receive the benefit of their efforts for increased circulation.

The Intelligencer appeals to such as think it may do good to co-operate with us now in extending its circulation.
